Roads Penny Harvey, Hannah Knox, 2015-11-06 Roads matter to people This claim is central to the work of Penny Harvey and Hannah Knox who in this book use the example of highway building in South America to explore what large public infrastructural projects can tell us about contemporary state formation social relations and emerging political economies Roads focuses on two main sites the interoceanic highway currently under construction between Brazil and Peru a major public private collaboration that is being realized within new internationally ratified regulatory standards and a recently completed one hundred kilometer stretch of highway between Iquitos the largest city in the Peruvian Amazon and a small town called Nauta one of the earliest colonial settlements in the Amazon The Iquitos Nauta highway is one of the most expensive roads per kilometer on the planet Combining ethnographic and historical research Harvey and Knox shed light on the work of engineers and scientists bureaucrats and construction company officials They describe how local populations anticipated each of the road projects even getting deeply involved in questions of exact routing as worries arose that the road would benefit some more than others Connectivity was a key recurring theme as people imagined the prosperity that will come by being connected to other parts of the country and with other parts of the world Sweeping in scope and conceptually ambitious Roads tells a story of global flows of money goods and people and of attempts to stabilize inherently unstable physical and social environments

An Anthropology of the Machine Michael Fisch, 2018-06-19 An astute account of Tokyo s commuter train network and an intellectually stimulating invitation to rethink the interaction between humans and machines Japan Forum With its infamously packed cars and disciplined commuters Tokyo s commuter train network is one of the most complex technical infrastructures on Earth In An Anthropology of the Machine Michael Fisch provides a nuanced perspective on how Tokyo s commuter train network embodies the lived realities of technology in our modern world Drawing on his fine grained knowledge of transportation work and everyday life in Tokyo Fisch shows how fitting into a system that operates on the extreme edge of sustainability can take a physical and emotional toll on a community while also creating a collective way of life one with unique limitations and possibilities An Anthropology of the Machine is a creative ethnographic study of the culture history and experience of commuting in Tokyo At the same time it is a theoretically ambitious attempt to think through our very relationship with technology and our possible ecological futures Fisch provides an unblinking glimpse into what it might be like to inhabit a future in which more and more of our infrastructure and the planet itself will have to operate beyond capacity to accommodate our ever growing population Not a rage against the machine but an urge to find new ways of coexisting with technology Contemporary Japan An extraordinary study Ethnos A fascinating in depth account of the innovations inventions sacrifices and creativity required to ensure Tokyo s millions of commuters keep rolling It also provides much food for thought as our transportation systems become increasingly reliant on automated technology Pacific Affairs

The Palgrave Handbook of the Anthropology of Technology Maja Hojer Bruun, Ayo Wahlberg, Rachel Douglas-Jones, Cathrine

Hasse, Klaus Hoeyer, Dorthe Brogård Kristensen, Brit Ross Winthereik, 2022-03-23 This Handbook offers an overview of the thriving and diverse field of anthropological studies of technology. It features 39 original chapters each reviewing the state of the art of current research and enlivening the field of study through ethnographic analysis of human technology interfaces, forms of social organisation, technological practices and/or systems of belief and meaning in different parts of the world. The Handbook is organised around some of the most important characteristics of anthropological studies of technology today: the diverse knowledge practices that technologies involve and on which they depend; the communities, collectives and categories that emerge around technologies; anthropology's contribution to proliferating debates on ethics, values and morality in relation to technology and infrastructures that highlight how all technologies are embedded in broader political economies and socio-historical processes that shape and often reinforce inequality and discrimination while also generating diversity. All chapters share a commitment to human experiences, embodiments, practices and materialities in the daily lives of those people and institutions involved in the development, manufacturing, deployment and/or use of particular technologies. Chapters 11 and 31 are available open access under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License via link.springer.com. The SAGE Handbook of the Digital Media Economy Terry Flew, Jennifer Holt, Julian Thomas, 2022-09-23

Debates about the digital media economy are at the heart of media and communication studies. An increasingly digitalised and datafied media environment has implications for every aspect of the field from ownership and production to distribution and consumption. The SAGE Handbook of the Digital Media Economy offers students, researchers and policy makers a multidisciplinary overview of contemporary scholarship relating to the intersection of the digital economy and the media, cultural and creative industries. It provides an overview of the major areas of debate and conceptual and methodological frameworks through chapters written by leading scholars from a range of disciplinary perspectives. PART 1 Key Concepts PART 2 Methodological Approaches PART 3 Media Industries of the Digital Economy PART 4 Geographies of the Digital Economy PART 5 Law, Governance and Policy Governing Agricultural Sustainability Phil Macnaghten, Susana Carro-Ripalda, 2015-06-26 Although GM crops are seen by their advocates as a key component of the future of world agriculture and as part of the solution for world poverty and hunger, their uptake has not been smooth nor universal; they have been marred by controversy and all too commonly their regulation has been challenged as inadequate even biased. This book aims to understand these dynamics, examining the impacts of GM crops in diverse contexts and their potentials to contribute to sustainable agricultural futures. Part 1 draws on research from three global rising powers: Brazil, India and Mexico, exploring the views of scientists, farmers and publics. Using a diverse array of ethnographic and qualitative methodologies, the book examines the dynamics that have underpinned the controversy in three diverse geo-political contexts: the manner in which dominant institutional framings have been closely aligned with the interests of powerful elites and the multiple ways in which these have been resisted through local symbolic and material practices. Part 2 comprises a series of short comment pieces from 11 leading social and natural scientists responding to the question of how to develop a policy framework for the responsible innovation of sustainable culturally appropriate and socially just agricultural GM technologies This innovative book offers new insights for researchers and postgraduates in Science and technology studies Agro ecology and Environmental Studies Development studies Anthropology Human Geography Sociology Political Science Public Administration Latin American studies and Asian studies      Handbook of Infrastructures and Cities Olivier Coutard, Daniel Florentin, 2024-04-12 Contributing towards a thriving research area this comprehensive Handbook presents a broad discussion of infrastructure as social phenomena It compiles diverse perspectives to delineate the current infrastructural turn and assess policy and research challenges relating to contemporary forms of infrastructural development
