(g) Modify the linear programming model formulated in part (b) to fit this new approach.

(h) Repeat part (c) for this modified model.

(i) Use a shadow price obtained in part (h) to analyze whether it would be worthwhile for the family to obtain a bank loan with a 10 percent interest rate to purchase more livestock now beyond what can be obtained with the $20,000 investment fund.

(j) For each of the three crops, use the post-optimality analysis information obtained in part (h) to identify how much latitude for error is available in estimating the net value per acre planted for that crop without changing the optimal solution.

Which two net values need to be estimated most carefully?

If both estimates are incorrect simultaneously, how close do the estimates need to be to guarantee that the optimal solution will not change?

Agricultural Innovation in Developing East Asia Riikka Rajalahti, 2021-12-29

Agricultural innovation has played a critical role in the economic transformation of developing East Asian countries over the past half century. The Green Revolution in the form of modern seed varieties, chemical fertilizers, pesticides, and modern machinery has contributed to increased crop yields and farm incomes and decreased poverty across the region. Although policy makers' traditional focus on expanding and intensifying agricultural production has brought many benefits, the focus on productivity has come at a rising cost. The environmental sustainability of agricultural production is increasingly under threat. Moreover, as countries in the region have become more urbanized and demand for processed foods has risen, inadequate food safety systems and related food safety hazards have created a new form of food insecurity. As detailed in Agricultural Innovation in Developing East Asia: Productivity, Safety, and Sustainability, a new generation of innovation in agriculture has the potential to address the challenges of productivity, sustainability, and food safety to deliver a triple win. To make the most of this promising wave of agricultural innovations, policy makers in the region will need to act to strengthen countries' agricultural innovation systems. This effort will require a cross-cutting approach including policy and institutional reforms, improved governance of countries' agri-food systems, and efforts to build farmers' and firms' capacities to adopt new technologies and to innovate.

Land Degradation Neutrality: Achieving SDG 15 by Forest Management Pankaj Panwar, Gopal Shukla, Jahangeer A. Bhat, Sumit Chakravarty, 2022-10-18

This edited book covers all aspects of forest deforestation and degradation in detail and their link to land degradation. Poor natural resource management is often a contributory factor in the depletion of resources, particularly like degradation of land, which hinders the goals to achieve land degradation neutrality (LDN). Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) target 15.3 states: "By 2030, combat desertification, restore degraded land and soil, including land affected by desertification, drought, and floods, and strive to achieve a land degradation neutral world." To achieve the set goals, a comprehensive multidirectional approach is required, involving policymakers, field functionaries, researchers, and above all, educators. The book compiles the field experiences and wisdom of some of the best researchers and authors working in the field of land degradations for quite a long time. The objective of the book is to disseminate the status of land degradation, the importance of achieving land degradation neutrality, and share success stories of reclaiming land degradation, and suggests means and ways of achieving land degradation neutrality. This book acts as a repository of knowledge on Land degradation neutrality for students, researchers, practitioners, and policy planners.
