

Female-Headed Households

- Colombia has a high number of female-headed households when compared to other Latin American countries.
- Migration to urban centres by more women than men has led to a high number of female-headed household in urban areas (Richter 1988). 48% of residents of the major metropolitan areas headed their own households as compared to 41 % in the countryside.
- Most of these women belong to an age group of 45-49 (De Vos and Richter), and this family arrangement is also dependent on the number of children and the age of the youngest child.
- Women with less education were also more likely to be heading a household by themselves.
