Busbea,2020-01-21 How new conceptions of human environment interaction became central to design theories and practices in the 1970s At the end of the 1960s new models of responsiveness between humans and their environments had a profound impact on theories and practices in architecture design art technology media and the sciences The resulting initiatives design philosophies art installations architectural projects exhibitions publications and symposia sought to bring together insights from biology systems theory psychology and anthropology with modernist legacies of total design In The Responsive Environment Larry D Busbea takes up this concept of environment as an object and method of design at the height of its aesthetic technical and discursive elaboration Exploring emerging paradigms of environmental belong to the main curricula in Scandinavia but are also carried out at many other universities in Europe the United States together an international conference on Old Norse religion was held in Lund in June 2004 About two hundred delegates from more than fifteen countries took part The intention was to gather researchers to encourage and improve scholarly exchange and dialogue and Old Norse religion in long term perspectives presents a selection of the proceedings from that conference The 75 contributions elucidate topics such as worldview and cosmology ritual and religious practice myth and memory as well as the reception and present day use of Old Norse religion The main editors of this volume have directed the
