8. Explain what the Storming of the Tuileries was.
In August 1792 the position of the French King Louis XVI came increasingly under threat. The final straw was the appeal by the Prussian Commander in Chief to the French Revolutionaries to submit to their king again. In the event of violence being used against the royal family and the royal Palais des Tuileries the Manifeste de Brunswick threatened bloody retaliation including the destruction of Paris. The furious French population and the Revolutionaries took this as proof that their king was collaborating with the kings of Prussia and Austria. They demanded that the National Assembly depose him by 9 August. When parliament could not make up its mind, on 10 August the impassioned population of Paris and the National Guards who had gone over to the Revolutionary side marched on the Palace of the Tuileries to the sound of the Marseillaise.
