Epidemics Sarah Dry,Melissa Leach,2010 Recent disease events such as SARS H1N1 and avian influenza and haemorrhagic fevers have focussed policy and public concern as never before on epidemics and so called emerging infectious diseases Understanding and responding to these often unpredictable events have become major challenges for local national and international bodies All too often responses can become restricted by implicit assumptions about who or what is to blame that may not capture the dynamics and uncertainties at play in the multi scale interactions of people animals and microbes As a result policies intended to forestall epidemics may fail and may even further threaten health livelihoods and human rights The book takes a unique approach by focusing on how different policy makers scientists and local populations construct alternative narratives accounts of the causes and appropriate responses to outbreaks about epidemics at the global national and local level The contrast between emergency oriented top down responses to what are perceived as potentially global outbreaks and longer term approaches to diseases such as AIDS which may now be considered endemic is highlighted Case studies on avian influenza SARS obesity H1N1 influenza HIV AIDS tuberculosis and haemorrhagic fevers cover a broad historical geographical and biological range As this book explores it is often the most vulnerable members of a population the poor the social excluded and the already ill who are likely to suffer most from epidemic diseases At the same time they may be less likely to benefit from responses that may be designed from a global perspective that neglects social ecological and political conditions on the ground This book aims to bring the focus back to these marginal populations to reveal the often unintended consequences of current policy responses to epidemics Important implications emerge for how epidemics are thought about and represented for how surveillance and response is designed and for whose knowledge and perspectives should be included Published in association with the Economic and Social Research Council ESRC The Guns of August 2008 Svante E.
