Drylongso A Self Portrait Of Black America:

Drylongso John Langston Gwaltney,1980 In writing his Self Portrait of Black America anthropologist folklorist and humanist John Gwaltney went in search of Core Black People the ordinary men and women who make up black America and asked them to define their culture Their responses recorded in Drylongso are to American oral history what blues and jazz are to American music If the people in William H Johnson s and Jacob Lawrence s paintings could talk this is what they would say

Black and Blue J. Hoberman,2012-04-03 Black Blue is the first systematic description of how American doctors think about racial differences and how this kind of thinking affects the treatment of their black patients The standard studies of medical racism examine past medical abuses of black people and do not address the racially motivated thinking and behaviors of physicians practicing medicine today Black Blue penetrates the physician s private sphere where racial fantasies and misinformation distort diagnoses and treatments Doctors have always absorbed the racial stereotypes and folkloric beliefs about racial differences that permeate the general population Within the world of medicine this racial folklore has infiltrated all of the medical sub disciplines from cardiology to gynecology to psychiatry Doctors have thus imposed white or black racial identities upon every organ system of the human body along with racial interpretations of black children the black elderly the black athlete black musicality black pain thresholds and other aspects of black minds and bodies The American medical establishment does not readily absorb either historical or current information about medical racism For this reason racial enlightenment will not reach medical schools until the current race aversive curricula include new historical and sociological perspectives

Black Feminist Anthropology Irma McClaurin, 2001 In the discipline's early days anthropologists by definition were assumed to be white and male Women and black scholars were relegated to the field's periphery From this marginal place white feminist anthropologists have successfully carved out an acknowledged intellectual space identified as feminist anthropology Unfortunately the works of black and non western feminist anthropologists are rarely cited and they have yet to be respected as significant shapers of the direction and transformation of feminist anthropology In this volume Irma McClaurin has collected for the first time essays that explore the role and contributions of black feminist anthropologists She has asked her contributors to disclose how their experiences as black women have influenced their anthropological practice in Africa the Caribbean and the United States and how anthropology has influenced their development as black feminists Every chapter is a unique journey that enables the reader to see how scholars are made The writers present material from their own fieldwork to demonstrate how these experiences were shaped by their identities Finally each essay suggests how the author's field experiences have influenced the theoretical and methodological choices she has made throughout her career Not since Diane Wolf's Feminist Dilemmas in the Field or Hortense Powdermaker's Stranger and Friend have we had such a breadth of women anthropologists discussing the critical
