Team WORKS! Chris Valletta, 2014-08-29 In Team WORKS former NFL player turned entrepreneur Chris Valletta describes the strategies and tools needed to build a championship caliber business team using athletic principles. He has spent his business career perfecting these traits and has helped produce three multi million dollar ventures in the process. This book raises the bar for business guides and expands over the normal approach other books preach. It's like having your own personal employee activist telling you exactly the right moves to make at the right time to achieve the greatest possible results for your business. With contributions from well known sport legends, famous entrepreneurs and a Foreword by Donald Trump, Valletta ties football tactics into building a championship business team. With humorous stories and real life adventures, Valletta's book will entertain football lovers and non football lovers alike.

The Role of Working Memory and Executive Function in Communication under Adverse Conditions Mary Rudner, Carine Signoret, 2016-06-20 Communication is vital for social participation. However, communication often takes place under suboptimal conditions. This makes communication harder and less reliable, leading at worst to social isolation. In order to promote participation, it is necessary to understand the mechanisms underlying communication in different situations. Human communication is often speech based, either oral or written, but may also involve gesture, either accompanying speech or in the form of sign language. For communication to be achieved, a signal generated by one person has to be perceived by another person, attended to, comprehended, and responded to. This process may be hindered by adverse conditions, including factors that may be internal to the sender (e.g. incomplete or idiosyncratic language production) or occur during transmission (e.g. background noise or signal processing) or be internal to the receiver (e.g. poor grasp of the language or sensory impairment). The extent to which these factors interact to generate adverse conditions may differ across the lifespan. Recent work has shown that successful speech communication under adverse conditions is associated with good cognitive capacity, including efficient working memory and executive abilities such as updating and inhibition. Further, frontoparietal networks associated with working memory and executive function have been shown to be activated to a greater degree when it is harder to achieve speech comprehension. To date, less work has focused on sign language communication under adverse conditions or the role of gestures accompanying speech communication under adverse conditions. It has been proposed that the role of working memory in communication under such conditions is to keep fragments of an incomplete signal in mind, updating them as appropriate and inhibiting irrelevant information until an adequate match can be achieved with lexical and semantic representations held in long term memory. Recent models of working memory highlight an episodic buffer whose role is the multimodal integration of information from the senses and long term memory. It is likely that the episodic buffer plays a key role in communication under adverse conditions. The aim of this research topic is to draw together multiple perspectives on communication under adverse conditions, including empirical and theoretical approaches. This will facilitate a scientific exchange among individual scientists and groups studying different aspects of communication under adverse conditions and or the role of cognition in communication As such this topic belongs firmly within the field of Cognitive Hearing Science Exchange of ideas among scientists with different perspectives on these issues will allow researchers to identify and highlight the way in which different internal and external factors interact to make communication in different modalities more or less successful across the lifespan Such exchange is the forerunner of broader dissemination of results which ultimately may make it possible to take measures to reduce adverse conditions thus facilitating communication Such measures might be implemented in relation to the built environment the design of hearing aids and public awareness King's college lectures on elocution

Charles John Plumptre,1883 Interpersonal Communication Richard West,Lynn H. Turner,2022-09-12 With its unique skill building approach Interpersonal Communication provides students with the knowledge and practice they need to make effective choices as communicators in today s rapidly changing technologically advanced and diverse society Rather than telling students how to communicate authors Richard L West and Lynn H Turner integrate skill sets in each chapter so students can apply what they learn to their own lives Rich with current examples and coverage of technology social media and diversity this new Fifth Edition makes clear connections among theory skills and the situations we all encounter daily This title is accompanied by a complete teaching and learning package in SAGE Vantage an intuitive learning platform that integrates quality SAGE textbook content with assignable multimedia activities and auto graded assessments to drive student engagement and ensure accountability Unparalleled in its ease of use and built for dynamic teaching and learning Vantage offers customizable LMS integration and best in class support Mining Coal and Undermining Gender Jessica Smith Rolston,2014-03-31 Though mining is an infamously masculine industry women make up 20 percent of all production crews in Wyoming s Powder River Basin the largest coal producing region in the United States How do these women fit into a working culture supposedly hostile to females This is what anthropologist Jessica Smith Rolston herself a onetime mine worker and the daughter of a miner set out to discover Her answers based on years of participant observation in four mines and extensive interviews with miners managers engineers and the families of mine employees offer a rich and surprising view of the working families that miners construct In this picture gender roles are not nearly as straightforward or as straitened as stereotypes suggest Gender is far from the primary concern of coworkers in crews Far more important Rolston finds is protecting the safety of the entire crew and finding a way to treat each other well despite the stresses of their jobs These miners share the burden of rotating shift work continually switching between twelve hour day and night shifts which deprives them of the daily rhythms of a typical home from morning breakfasts to bedtime stories Rolston identifies the mine workers response to these shared challenges as a new sort of constructed kinship that both challenges and reproduces gender roles in their everyday working and family lives Crews expectations for coworkers to treat one another like family and to adopt an agricultural work ethic tend to minimize gender differences And yet these differences remain tenacious in the equation of masculinity with technical expertise and of femininity with household responsibilities For Rolston such lingering areas of inequality highlight the importance of structural constraints that flout a common impulse among men and women to neutralize the significance of gender at home and in the workplace At a time when the Appalachian region continues to dominate discussion of mining culture this book provides a very different and unexpected view of how miners live and work together and of how their lives and work reconfigure ideas of gender and kinship Journal of the Society of Arts ,1879

King's College Lectures on Elocution; Or, The Physiology and Culture of Voice and Speech Charles John Plumptre,1895 Intercultural Language Use and Language Learning Eva Alcon Soler,Maria Pilar Safont Jorda,2007-05-24 Eva Alc n Soler Maria Pilar Safont Jord Universitat Jaume I Spain The main purpose of the present book is to broaden the scope of research on the development of intercultural communicative competence Bearing this purpose in mind English learners are considered as intercultural speakers who share their interest for engaging in real life communication According to Byram and Fleming 1998 the intercultural speaker is someone with knowledge of one or more cultures and social identities and who enjoys discovering and maintaining relationships with people from other cultural backgrounds although s he has not been formally trained for that purpose Besides possessing knowledge of at least two cultures is the case of many learners in bilingual or multilingual communities In these contexts the objective of language learning should then focus on developing intercultural competence which in turn may involve promoting language diversity while encouraging English as both a means and an end of instruction see Alc n this volume This is the idea underlying the volume which further sustains

Kramersch's argument 1998 against the native non native dichotomy Following that author we also believe that in a multilingual world where learners may belong to more than one speech community their main goal is not to become a native speaker of English but to use this language as a tool for interaction among many other languages and cultures InfoWorld, 1994-10-17 InfoWorld is targeted to Senior IT professionals Content is segmented into Channels and Topic Centers
