This groundbreaking work is the product of interdisciplinary teamwork drawing on academic knowledge and real world experience to provide teachers with the skills their pupils need to succeed in the classroom. This insightful text's preface takes readers on a tour of the complex field of English pedagogy, shedding light on the foundational ideas, processes and approaches of contemporary language teaching. Readers will discover an all encompassing examination of language acquisition in these pages, including not only lexical and grammatical aspects but also the historical, social and cultural factors that influence language usage. Teaching Motivation for Student Engagement Debra K. Meyer, Alyssa Emery, 2021-03-01. Helping teachers understand and apply theory and research is one of the most challenging tasks of teacher preparation and professional development. As they learn about motivation and engagement, teachers need conceptually rich yet easy to use frameworks. At the same time, teachers must understand that student engagement is not separate from development, instructional decision making, classroom management, student relationships and assessment. This volume on teaching teachers about motivation addresses these challenges. The authors share multiple approaches and frameworks to cut through the growing complexity and variety of motivational theories and tie theory and research to real world experiences that teachers are likely to encounter in their courses and classroom experiences. Additionally, each chapter is summarized with key take away practices. A shared perspective across all the chapters in this volume on teaching teachers about motivation is walking the talk. In every chapter, readers will be provided with rich examples of how research on and principles of classroom motivation can be reconceptualized through a variety of college teaching strategies. Teachers and future teachers learning about motivation need to experience explicit modeling practice.

and constructive feedback in their college courses and professional development in order to incorporate those into their own practice. In addition, a core assumption throughout this volume is the importance of understanding the situated nature of motivation and avoiding a one size fits all approach in the classroom. Teachers need to fully interrogate their instructional practices not only in terms of motivational principles but also for their cultural relevance, equity and developmental appropriateness. Just like P 12 students, college students bring their histories as learners and beliefs about motivation to their formal study of motivation. That is why college instructors teaching motivation must begin by helping students evaluate their personal beliefs and experiences. Relatedly, college instructors need to know their students and model differentiating their interactions to support each of them. The authors in this volume have collectively decades of experience teaching at the college level and conducting research in motivation and provide readers with a variety of strategies to help teachers and future teachers explore how motivation is supported and undermined. In each chapter in this volume, readers will learn how college instructors can demonstrate what effective motivationally supportive classrooms look sound and feel like.

School-based food and nutrition education Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-12-10 School based food and nutrition education (SFNE) helps schoolchildren and the school community to achieve lasting improvements in their food practices and outlooks, build the capacity to change and to adapt to external change and pass on their learning to others. SFNE has also an important role in complementing efforts that are being made globally to improve food environments and in empowering children and adolescents to become active participants in shaping the food system to be better able to deliver healthy and sustainable diets. Despite increasing interest for SFNE, the evidence that supports it and its potential, much of traditional SFNE particularly in LMICs is largely underfunded, not delivering results and disconnected from other key interventions that aim to support the food nutrition environment and education nexus. SFNE is under resourced with capacity development opportunities lacking throughout the school system. This White Paper is the first document of its kind and it is based on the evidence, professional expertise and field experience, lessons learned and documented challenges of SFNE work in a variety of contexts. It presents the case for raising the profile and transforming the vision and learning model of SFNE. This document is directed firstly to a technical audience working in governmental organizations that deal with schoolchildren and adolescents and is also of interest to researchers, technical advisors, decision makers, donors and investors, civil society and UN organizations.
