Maisch,R. Oelze,2007-01-18 During the last decades progress has been made in the treatment of patients who survived myocardial infarction Nevertheless patients who survive an acute myocardial infarction are at high risk with life expectancy half that of their peers who have not experienced similar events and with increased risk for subsequent cardiovascular events and death The risk of sudden death increases with severity of systolic dysfunction after myocardial infarction In recent years it has become clear that in addition to risk factors such as overweight lack of exercise smoking hypertension and hypercholesterolemia psychosocial factors play a key role for prognosis in patients with myocardial infarction Therefore there is high medical need for drugs which lower the incidence of sudden death and have an effect on other risk factors such as depression OMACOR a pharmaceutical preparation of highly purified and concentrated 3 polyunsaturated acids may present such a drug It lowers the incidence of sudden death in patients with myocardial infarction and decreases depression This publication focuses on the effect of 3 polyunsaturated fatty acids on different risk factors in patients with cardiovascular disease In addition aspects of prevention of cardiovascular disease risk factors and pharmacokinetics of 3 fatty acids ethyl esters are considered The Effects of Omega-3 Polyunsaturated Fatty Acids on Cardiac Rhythm: Antiarrhythmic, Proarrhythmic, Both or Neither? George E. Billman, The cardiovascular benefits of dietary omega 3 polyunsaturated fatty acids n 3 PUFA have been actively investigated for nearly 40 years Beginning with the pioneering studies of Bang and Dyerberg epidemiological data provide strong evidence for an inverse relationship between fatty fish consumption and cardiac mortality In contrast to these observational studies interventional studies using n 3 PUFAs for the secondary prevention of adverse cardiovascular events in patients with heart disease have yielded conflicting results some studies have reported reduced sudden cardiac death or mortality while other more recent studies have reported either no effect or an increase in adverse cardiac events Nevertheless the American Heart Association and the American College of Cardiology continue to recommend fish oils for the secondary prevention of coronary artery disease Based in part upon these recommendations consumer demand for n 3 PUFA products both nutritional supplements and foods enriched with these lipids has exploded In the United States alone it has been estimated that in 2004 5 10% of the adult U S population were taking a fish oil supplement with annual sales growth of 40% In fact the sales of these products are projected to exceed 7 billion dollars by the end of 2011 www.marketresearch.com product reports Despite the extensive marketing of fish oil products a scientific consensus on the effects of n 3 PUFA on cardiac rhythm has yet to be reached It is the purpose of this Research Topic to stimulate a discussion on the putative benefits of n 3 PUFAs on cardiac rhythm Authors are invited to submit clinical translational or experimental research articles reviews and hypotheses that address the actions of n 3 PUFA positive negative or neutral on cardiac rhythm and cardiac electrophysiology Studies that evaluate the effects of n 3 PUFA on myocyte electrical properties atrial fibrillation ventricular fibrillation and heart rate variability are particularly welcome
