Senior Lecturer in Management,
Department of Management, South Eastern University of Sri Lanka

Abstract

Developing strategies is often concerned with analyzing internal and external environment. Although SWOT has been widely used for situation analysis, it has number of drawbacks. This study aimed at identifying the strategic factors in a more systematic way of identifying strategic factors. Tourism is amoneg the most important source of foreign exchange for Sri Lankan economy and the Sri Lanka is prioritizing tourism and has started many strategic decisions to strengthen the sector. A sample of eighty four tourism related respondents from south coastal in Sri Lanka participated in this study. The SFAS (Strategic Factor Analysis Summary) matrix summarized ten strategic factors. The results of this study provide situation analysis and open a process of finding a strategic fit between external opportunities and internal strengths while working around external threats and internal weaknesses in the south coastal tourism in Sri Lanka. Implications of findings also discussed.

INTRODUCTION

Today strategic skills is crucial for competing in this dynamic environment. Outperforming strategic skills is an important factor to defeat any powerful company (Davidovic & Jovanovic, 2012). Organizations attempt to outperform their competitors (Drucker, 1999). Strategy take part in decisions regarding the segments of the market to pursue and the type of products to develop (Porter, 1996). Dynamic capabilities in strategic decisions should be developed to change and reconfigure to make the organization more adaptive to an uncertain environment (Thomas & David, 2012). If the environment is not changing and stable no need for strategy (David, 2011). The level of skill in ability of forecasting and reacting to the changing environment determine the long-term success or failure of the organization (Grant & Jordan, 2012). The strategic planning process start with careful analysis of the internal and external environmental analysis of the organization. Like all industry tourism industry also subjected to environmental changes. Environment is a core feature of the tourism product and tourist are consumers of the environment (Nedim, 2013). Tourism strategy represents a key challenge to managers because of the nature of the products being sold and of the complexities of the environment in which tourism exists. Especially, most tourism products are services and intangible (Moutinho, 2000).

Further, Sri Lanka has been globally acclaimed as one of the finest destinations (KCA, 2011). Tourism sector has been identified as a key sector pushing the country's economic growth (Ranasinghe & Deyshappriya, 2012). Sri Lanka's tourism industry vision is to establish Sri Lanka as Asia's most treasured island, highlighting its beautiful beaches, warm and friendly people, with a strong nature, culture and adventure offering, raising its profile to that of an Asian tourism icon (Sri Lanka Tourism Promotion Bureau, 2010). To achieve this vision Sri Lanka tourism requires effective strategic planning. Many flagship projects are been implemented in the tourism industry in Sri Lanka (Sooriyagoda, 2013). Broader objectives of these projects are to promote tourism industry as the major contributor to the country's economy, achieve balanced regional development, decrease the regional disparity and focus on the potentials of the region to maximize economic gain through sustainable development. A number of strategies are formulated to achieve these objectives. The first step in any strategy formulation is strategic analysis. The purpose of strategic analysis is to gather information about the internal and external environment. External environment is scanned to identify possible opportunities and threats, whereas internal environment is scanned for strengths and weaknesses. SWOT is an acronym used to describe the particular strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats that are strategic factors for an organization. A SWOT analysis is a simple but widely used tool that helps in understanding the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats of an organization (Robbins & Coulter, 2012). The process sometimes involves an additional stage of condensing SWOT into a survey of the "key issues" those which require the most urgent action or which the strategy should be particularly designed to address (Stern & Deimler, 2006). If the information from the analysis

From developed to developing nations the utilization of tourism as a development strategy has been a prevalent practice at both national and local levels In this compelling read the authors explore an understanding of how countries envision the future of their tourism sectors and chart a course towards that vision Health and Corporate/Urban Sustainability

Jianfu Shen, Xunpeng Shi, Eddie Chi-man Hui, 2025-04-29 Prior health studies have explored the relationship between employee health and employee performance e.g. productivity, innovation, etc. at the workplace. A few studies also show that at the country level, health and healthcare expenditure are positively associated with economic performance. However, the studies that investigate the associations between health and corporate urban outcomes in terms of sustainability practices, economic value growth, resilience, etc. remain scant. Employee health also influences corporate culture, employee satisfaction, productivity, innovation, financial performance, and its long-term value. Health can also influence urban vitality and economic growth. Cities with good public health could also be more resilient to pandemic such as COVID 19. Sustainability becomes the key theme in corporate and urban developments. Further studies are needed to explore the roles of health in firms and cities' real impacts and values Niche Tourism and Sustainability Anna Farmaki, Pramendra Singh, Viana Hassan, 2024-12-23

Niche tourism, also known as special interest tourism, refers to specialized tourism products offered to a small group of tourists. Examples include ecotourism, rural tourism, birdwatching tourism, dark tourism, and motorcycle tourism. Regarded as the antidote to mass tourism, niche tourism has become particularly popular in recent years as a tourism developmental option that can address the problems caused by mass tourism, including overtourism. It is commonly acknowledged that niche tourism fosters responsible tourism practices, minimizes negative tourism impacts, and helps preserve the environment and culture of destinations, thereby promoting sustainability in tourism. Likewise, niche tourism seems to be better equipped to address the needs and preferences of today's sophisticated and diverse tourist market. This book is a collection of 12 conceptual and empirical chapters presenting niche tourism cases from around the world. It examines tourist behaviour and experiences, resident perspectives, implementation practices, and future prospects, and contributes to the debate on tourism development and sustainability Digital Transformation, Strategic Resilience, Cyber Security and Risk Management

Tourism destination managers must understand what tourists perceive as engaging, intense, and memorable in order to remain successful. However, care must also be given to the residents' perception of local tourism development and how it impacts their community. This is a fundamental aspect for tourism development since host communities that support tourism development tend to be more hospitable with tourists which influences their satisfaction and loyalty. Moreover, the interaction with residents of host communities is a crucial component of the quality of the tourist experience contributing to the long-term success and sustainability of destinations. The Handbook of Research on Resident and Tourist Perspectives on Travel Destinations is a collection of innovative research that examines travel destinations from the resident and tourist perspectives in order to better support and inform the tourism development process and to make the destinations attractive to visitors while at the same time contributing to resident quality of life and happiness. While highlighting topics including sustainable development, hotel management, and customer satisfaction, this book is ideally designed for government officials, tour developers, travel agencies, brand managers, advertising agencies, restaurateurs, public administrators, hotel managers, tourist industry professionals, academicians, researchers, and students.
