Chapter 6: Inventory Planning and Valuation

- For most merchandising companies, merchandise inventory is the largest asset
- To be successful, must keep enough inventory on hand to meet the customers' needs but not too much to tie up money in inventory
- Often use computer systems to track inventory – provide an easier method of providing info to managers to allow them to make effective buying decisions

Section 1: The Nature of Merchandise Inventory

- The cost of merchandise available for sale consists of:
 - The cost of the beginning inventory
 - The cost of the net purchases added to the inventory during the fiscal period
- At the end of the fiscal period, cost of merchandise available for sale is divided into
 - The cost of the ending inventory – it is a current asset that will be charged as costs in future fiscal periods
 - The cost of the merchandise sold during the current fiscal period – the cost affects the amount of net income reported for this fiscal period

when society increasingly lets print go in favour of storing retrieving and manipulating electronic information What happens after the book After the Book explores how the academic library of the 21st Century is first and foremost a provider of electronic information services Contemporary users expect today s library to provide information as quickly and efficiently as other online information resources The book argues that librarians need to change what they know how they work and how they are perceived in order to succeed according to the terms of this new paradigm This title is structured into eight chapters An introduction defines the challenge of electronic resources and makes the case for finding solutions and following chapters cover diversions and half measures and the problem for libraries in the 21st century Later chapters discuss solving problems through professional identity and preparation before final chapters cover reorganizing libraries to serve users adapting to scarcity and the digital divide Describes how electronic resources constitute both a challenge and an opportunity for libraries Argues that librarians can re define themselves Puts the case that libraries can be reorganized to optimize electronic resource management and information services based on contemporary technology and user needs

Digital Era Governance Patrick Dunleavy, 2006-11-02 Government information systems are big business costing over 1 per cent of GDP a year They are critical to all aspects of public policy and governmental operations Governments spend billions on them for instance the UK alone commits 14 billion a year to public sector IT operations Yet governments do not generally develop or run their own systems instead relying on private sector computer services providers to run large long run contracts to provide IT Some of the biggest companies in the world IBM EDS Lockheed Martin etc have made this a core market The book shows how governments in some countries the USA Canada and Netherlands have maintained much more effective policies than others in the UK Japan and Australia It shows how public managers need to retain and develop their own IT expertise and to carefully maintain well contested markets if they are to deliver value for money in their dealings with the very powerful global IT industry This book describes how a critical aspect of the modern state is managed or in some cases mismanaged It will be vital reading for public managers IT professionals and business executives alike as well as for students of modern government business and information studies
