Background and Motivation The basic notion of artificial neural networks ANNs as we understand them today was perhaps first formalized by McCulloch and Pitts 1943 in their model of an artificial neuron Research in this field remained somewhat dormant in the early years perhaps because of the limited capabilities of this method and because there was no clear indication of its potential uses However interest in this area picked up momentum in a dramatic fashion with the works of Hopfield 1982 and Rumelhart et al 1986 Not only did these studies place artificial neural networks on a firmer mathematical footing but also opened the door to a host of potential applications for this computational tool Consequently neural network computing has progressed rapidly along all fronts theoretical development of different learning algorithms computing capabilities and applications to diverse areas from neurophysiology to the stock market Initial studies on artificial neural networks were prompted by a desire to have computers mimic human learning As a result the jargon associated with the technical literature on this subject is replete with expressions such as excitation and inhibition of neurons strength of synaptic connections learning rates training and network experience ANNs have also been referred to as neurocomputers by people who want to preserve this analogy

Over the last fifty years the ability to carry out analysis as a precursor to decision making in engineering design has increased dramatically In particular the advent of modern computing systems and the development of advanced numerical methods have made computational modelling a vital tool for producing optimized designs This text explores how computer aided analysis has revolutionized aerospace engineering providing a comprehensive coverage of the latest technologies underpinning advanced computational design Worked case studies and over 500 references to the primary research literature allow the reader to gain a full understanding of the technology giving a valuable insight into the world's most complex engineering systems

Key Features Includes background information on the history of aerospace design and established optimization geometrical and mathematical modelling techniques setting recent engineering developments in a relevant context Examines the latest methods such as evolutionary and response surface based optimization adjoint and numerically differentiated sensitivity codes uncertainty analysis and concurrent systems integration schemes using grid based computing Methods are illustrated with real world applications of structural statics dynamics and fluid mechanics to satellite aircraft and aero engine design problems Senior undergraduate and postgraduate engineering students taking courses in aerospace vehicle and engine design will find this a valuable resource It will also be useful for practising engineers and researchers working on computational approaches to design
