

Forensic Facial Reconstruction

Forensic facial reconstruction is the representation of an individual's face from skeletal remains, used where other forms of identification are very difficult or impossible, or even give a picture so far ahead in forensic cases or, in archaeological contexts, provide a tangible impression of real individuals from our past. This comprehensive work starts with a discussion of the importance of the face in society and the history of facial reconstruction, going on to evaluate the accuracy of modern reconstruction methods. The Manchester method of facial reconstruction and the relationships between the hard and soft tissues of the face are described in detail. Critically, this book also describes the methods and problems associated with reconstructing the faces of children. Collating all published facial tissue data and describing tissue variations with reference to age, sex, stature and ethnic origin, this book will be an important reference volume for all practitioners in the field.

CAROLINE WILKINSON is Line Manager at the Unit of Art in Medicine at the University of Manchester, which has an international reputation for forensic and archaeological facial reconstruction. Dr Wilkinson's research has focused on facial tissue depth and provide facial reconstructions, and she is currently involved in the development of a computerised facial reconstruction system. In addition to her work as a forensic expert she has also worked extensively on reconstructions for archaeological investigations, including those for television programmes on the BBC, Channel Four and Discovery.
