

First body paragraph:

On the surface, The Old Man and the Sea appears to be a straightforward tale of the three-day battle between a fisherman called Santiago and a great marlin. The story is told in the form of an omniscient narrator, which allows the reader to participate in Santiago's struggle.

For example:

Then he began to pity the great fish that he had hooked. He is wonderful and strange and knows how old he is, he thought. Never have I had such a strong fish nor one who acted so strangely...But perhaps he has been hooked many times before and he knows that this is how he should make his fight. He cannot know that it is only one man against him, nor that it is an old man. (OMTS 48-49)

This passage illustrates the simple and natural sentence structure that is typical to Hemmingway. The author provides a glimpse of the theme in the struggle between Santiago and the fish. He suggests that the old man and fish are each locked in a desperate struggle for survival, although the desperation is hidden by using understatement. The short, emotionless sentences that he uses are loaded with the dramatic tension which he sees in life.
