Susholtz,2024-11-15 When Caren Holtzman and Lynn Susholtz look around a classroom they see a veritable goldmine of mathematical investigations involving number measurement size shape symmetry ratio and proportion They also think of the ways great artists have employed these concepts in their depictions of objects and space for example Picasso s use of geometric shapes in his Cubist still lifes or contemporary artist Tara Donovan's room-sized sculptures of everyday items. In their new book Object Lessons, Caren, a math educator, and Lynn, an artist and art educator, use a highly visual approach to show students and teachers the art in math and the math in art. Integrating visual arts into math experiences makes the lessons accessible, engaging, and meaningful for a wide range of students. In each chapter, the authors use everyday objects to create rigorous hands-on activities that address key mathematics standards and concepts. Each lesson provides an introduction to the featured object that explains how it connects to key mathematical concepts, a discussion of the artist's art styles and techniques, featured activities organized by grade level and math content area, the basic materials required to prepare and teach each lesson, a clear picture of what the lesson will look like in a classroom, and a list of resources. The book and its accompanying CD feature a wonderful gallery of images including art photos and student work, and a collection of links to art education organizations, museums, and Web sites that focus on the work of forty major artists. The Cambridge

Companion to Children's Literature M. O. Grenby, Andrea Immel, 2009-12-10 A wide-ranging introduction to an exciting and rapidly expanding field. Understanding the Worlds of Young Children Laurie Katz, Melissa Wilson, 2021-03-01

Children begin their literacy journeys from the moment of their birth as they begin to read the world around them. They embark on their journeys as they observe and react to the gestures and voices of their family members and hear and use the language in which they are immersed to communicate with others. Through their interactions with the sign systems surrounding them, they become socialized into the cultural practices of their communities and construct meaning in their lives. Children's entrance into formal education, where they begin to read the word, further connects them with literacies of other communities, both nationally and globally. Thus, the early years become a critical time to build and support current and future learning, where children develop into creative problem solvers, thoughtful communicators, and productive leaders and citizens of the next generation. This volume extends current knowledge of children's learning by exploring the importance of children's earliest years within the context of their families and communities and connecting those years with their formal education. Development is viewed through a child's perezhivanie, a concept by Vygotsky (1933, 1934, 1994) that expresses the unity of the individual's biological and cultural development. According to Vygotsky, development does not isolate the individual from her/his social context. Children are social beings from birth who acquire and make meanings of their world through their interactions with their families, friends, childcare providers, religious groups, and other community members. These interactions encompass the way children use language within children's ecosocial, physical, and social worlds where development occurs. How these ecosocial worlds support each other or collide will impact children's literacy development. This unique contribution provides the reader with opportunities to: a) Recognize the importance of literacy practices as cultural and social within the context of the multiple worlds of young children; b) promote a continuity of children's ecosocial worlds into their formal education through concepts of perezhivanie; and c) envision an alternative framework for recognizing children's ecosocial worlds outside of the classroom and integrating aspects of those worlds to involve families in their child's formal education
