Toward Assessing Business Ethics Education Diane L. Swanson, Dann G. Fisher, 2010-11-01 Toward Assessing Business Ethics Education edited by Diane L Swanson and Dann G Fisher of Kansas State University is a sequel to their book Advancing Business Ethics Education in the Ethics in Practice IAP book series The focus on assessment in this second book is a timely response to the urgent search among business schools for ways to teach and assess ethics at a time when the public s faith in corporations and business schools has been undermined greatly by the failure of both to respond to widespread corruption and scandals in the business sector Although no one expects business education alone to resolve these problems the distinguished scholars represented in this book advocate that business schools should at least do their part by exposing their students to decision models that incorporate ethical dimensions on behalf of corporate stakeholders and society at large As the book s title conveys it is then important to assess key learning objectives to insure that business students graduate knowing ethics fundamentals and armed with the ability to recognize ethical dilemmas and possible solutions during the course of their careers This book will speak to all who are interested in accountability for business ethics education especially business school deans university administrators faculty members students and prospective employers This audience will find that the enterprise of assessing business ethics education is advanced in three ways First the book functions as a venue for distinguished scholars to share the innovative ways that they are assessing ethics coverage in courses and degree programs Second these authors identify what needs to be assessed and the means for doing so Third the book serves not only as a guide to assessment but also as a platform for expanding and improving ethics coverage in business schools Moreover an important take away for readers is the provision of a simple formula first advocated by Diane L Swanson and William C Frederick University of Pittsburgh in 2005 for delivering ethics education that minimizes assessment errors By following this formula business schools can provide assurances that ethics will not be assessed as being sufficient when it is woefully inadequate or even missing in the curriculum and that it cannot be distorted diluted or trivialized by uninformed

coverage and still pass inspection Avoiding these assessment errors is critical in an educational environment in which weak accrediting standards for ethics go hand in hand with spotty uniformed coverage that would not be tolerated for other business disciplines

Teaching Business Ethics for Effective Learning Ronald R. Sims, 2002-05-30 The key to teaching business ethics successfully says Sims is to start with clear goals and a sensible expectation of outcomes and with a true knowledge and appreciation of how people actually learn Seems obvious enough he says but the surprise is that so few understand this Thus the teaching of business ethics is often an unproductive frustrating exercise in futility Sims hopes to change that Proceeding with the conviction that open communications between teacher and student before during and after the teaching experience is vital Sims identifies key teaching processes gives practical advice on designing and planning the curriculum and offers guidance on how to develop a climate conducive to effective learning He highlights the importance of creating a classroom climate that encourages open dialogue good moral conversation and conversational learning And throughout he emphasizes that learning styles and experiential learning theory are cornerstones of teaching business ethics thus taking an approach unlike any in the literature An important guide for those who are new to teaching this essential subject Sims book will also be helpful for more experienced teachers who are wondering why their own methods do not always work or do not work as well as they believe they should Sims identifies important processes that must be managed if business ethics is to be taught and learned successfully processes such as creating stakeholder commitment to the goals purposes and outcomes of the teaching effort and curriculum design and planning that are attuned to individual differences in learning styles motivation and values Also included in Sims processes are the development of individual school outcomes and expectations and the assessment procedures that can measure them He discusses the importance of incorporating debriefing into an experiential learning exercise or discussion and goes on to give an in depth discussion of the pedagogical approaches that allow teachers to teach the practical and theoretical components of the subject simultaneously Well illustrated with examples such as an interdisciplinary approach to teaching and a way to institutionalize outcomes assessment by means of total quality management Sims book returns constantly to his major theme that to teach business ethics effectively the teacher must first create a climate of trust and sharing within and between students and between students and teacher and that the teacher must have a concrete way to measure the impact of the teaching effort s results
