The Economics of Protected Marine Species: Concepts in Research and Management Kristy Wallmo, Kathryn Bisack, Daniel K. Lew, Dale E. Squires, 2016-10-21 Protected marine species have populations that are depleted decreasing or are at risk of extinction or local extirpation As of 2015 The International Union for the Conservation of Nature a global environmental organization lists approximately 737 marine species worldwide that are considered at risk of extinction Many are provided legal protection through national laws requiring research and management measures aimed at recovering and maintaining the species at a sustainable population level Integral to the policy decision process involving the management and recovery of marine species is the consideration of trade offs between the economic and ecological costs and benefits of protection This suggests that economics at its core the study of trade offs has a significant role In the U S a somewhat traditional use of economics in protected species research and management has involved cost minimization or cost effectiveness analyses to help select or prioritize conservation actions Economic research has also provided estimates of public non market benefits of recovering species which can be used in larger management frameworks such as ecosystem based management and coastal and marine spatial planning Inherent in much of this research however are complex biological and ecological relationships in which varying degrees of scientific uncertainty are present Addressing this type of uncertainty can affect the economic outcomes related to protected species For example recent work suggests that increasing scientific precision in biological sampling and models can greatly affect the magnitude of economic benefits to commercial fisheries while other research suggests that public non market benefits of species recovery are sensitive to uncertainty about baseline population estimates Previous research has illustrated the importance of understanding the biological ecological and economic aspects of protected species management and recovery In this research topic we synthesize current protected marine species economic research and expand the discussion on present and future challenges related to protected species economics The series of manuscripts brings together an array of prominent researchers and advances our understanding of the ecological and economic aspects of managing and recovering protected marine species

Economic Analysis for Ecosystem-Based Management Daniel Holland, James Sanchirico, Robert Johnston, Deepak Jogleka, 2012-06-25 Ocean and coastal management regimes are increasingly subject to competing demands from stakeholders Regulations must not only address fishing recreation and shipping but also sand and gravel mining gas pipelines harbor port development offshore wind and tidal energy facilities liquefied natural gas terminals offshore aquaculture and desalinization plants The growing variety and intensity of ocean and coastal uses increases the call for a more holistic comprehensive and coordinated management approach that recognizes the often complex relationships between natural and human systems For both economist and non economist audiences this book describes ways in which economic analysis can be an important tool to inform and improve ecosystem based management EBM Topics include modeling economic impacts benefit cost analysis spatial considerations in EBM incentives and human behaviors and accounting for uncertainty in policy analysis Throughout the book the authors elucidate the different kinds of insights which can be gained from the use of different economic tools In this rigorous and accessible work the authors defy the conventional stereotype that economic perspectives necessarily favor the greatest commercial development. Instead, they demonstrate how comprehensive economic analyses consider the full range of potential services offered by marine and coastal ecosystems, including the conservation of biodiversity and creation of recreational opportunities.

Review of the Marine Recreational Information Program National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Ocean Studies Board, Committee on the Review of the Marine Recreational Information Program, 2017-08-24. The National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) is responsible for collecting information on marine recreational angling. It does so principally through the Marine Recreational Information Program (MRIP), a survey program that consists of an in-person survey at fishing access sites and a mail survey, in addition to other complementary or alternative surveys. Data collected from anglers through MRIP supply fisheries managers with essential information for assessing fish stocks. In 2006, the National Research Council provided an evaluation of MRIP's predecessor, the Marine Recreational Fisheries Statistics Survey (MRFSS). That review, Review of Recreational Fisheries Survey Methods, presented conclusions and recommendations in six categories: sampling issues, statistical estimation issues, human dimensions, program management and support, communication and outreach, and general recommendations. After spending nearly a decade addressing the recommendations, NMFS requested another evaluation of its modified survey program, MRIP. This report, the result of that evaluation, serves as a 10-year progress report. It recognizes the progress that NMFS has made, including major improvements in the statistical soundness of its survey designs, and also highlights some remaining challenges and provides recommendations for addressing them.
