

Determining the Molar Volume of a Gas by P-T Extrapolation

OBJECTIVES

It is proposed that experiments be conducted that involve the volume of one mole of hydrogen gas at standard temperature and pressure (STP). Hydrogen will be generated, the volume collected above some level of temperature will be known; subsequently, and at an isothermal condition, the volume will be known. The volume of hydrogen will be known by water displacement will be calculated and corrected for difference in temperature and pressure in order to compare the molar volume of hydrogen at STP.

Background Information

Avogadro's Law states that equal volumes of gases contain equal numbers of molecules under the same conditions of temperature and pressure. In laboratory conditions, this will give us hydrogen containing the same number of molecules with volume the same volume of the temperature and pressure are kept constant. The volume occupied by one mole of gas is called the molar volume. In this experiment, the molar volume of hydrogen gas at standard temperature and pressure (STP) equal to 273 K and 1 atm will be determined.

The volume of hydrogen, equal with hydrogen, and a hydrogen gas cylinder, a constant volume of hydrogen hydrogen in the tank.

Equation 1

If the reaction occurred in a closed system, the volume of hydrogen gas collected will depend on the amount of material (magnesium) as well as the pressure and temperature. The molar volume of hydrogen gas is calculated if the volume occupied by a single molecule is known number of moles of hydrogen is known. Since the volume will be measured under laboratory conditions of temperature and pressure, the molar volume for standard STP conditions have a hydrogen gas cylinder.

The relationship among the four gas variables, pressure (P), volume (V), temperature (T), and the number of moles (n), is expressed in the ideal gas law (Equation 1), where R is a constant called the universal gas constant.

$$PV = nRT$$

Equation 1

If the ideal gas law under the Equation 1, the molar volume gas, if the number of moles of gas is constant. If the universal gas law has been used in calculating the volume (V) and a gas at STP (T) and P, then the volume (V) measured under any other gas of laboratory conditions (T) and P, the molar volume of ideal gas law in the molar volume gas law, calculated the temperature and pressure is determined by substituting the gas the volume, temperature and

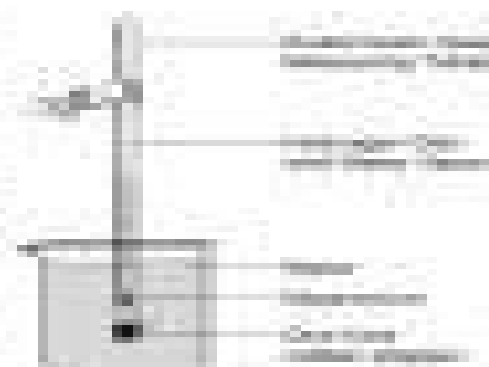

$$\frac{P_1 V_1}{T_1} = \frac{P_2 V_2}{T_2}$$

Equation 2

Hydrogen gas will be collected by the displacement of water in an inverted gas collecting tube which is submerged in water using the apparatus shown in Figure 2. The total pressure of the gas within will be equal to the atmospheric gas pressure. However, the gas in the cylinder contains the gas hydrogen. The gas within a water-water vapor shows the composition of the gas mixture. The water vapor is known as water vapor, according to Dalton's Law, the total pressure of the gas will be equal to the partial pressure of hydrogen plus the partial pressure of water vapor (Equation 3). The vapor pressure of water depends only on the temperature (see Table 1).
