Promoting Information in the Marketplace for Financial Services Paul Latimer, Philipp Maume, 2014-11-14 This book provides a unique comparative and global analysis of the regulation of disclosure in financial securities markets. It is written by two authors who represent both the new world Australia and the old world Germany. The authors present their research in the global business context with legal and regulatory perspectives including some references from Africa, Asia, the Middle East and South America. After every boom and bust, legislators pass new disclosure legislation often in a heated environment fuelled by politics and the media. Little regard is paid to existing regulation or the lessons learned from earlier regulation. The result is the continuing enactment of redundant and overlapping disclosure laws. Since financial markets are often described as markets for information, the failure to ensure disclosure is at the heart of financial services regulation. This book argues that the solution to the failure of disclosure is a brief, easily understood, principles-based plain English safety net amendment to statute law such as you must keep the financial market fully informed, a measure that would support effective mandatory continuous disclosure of information to financial markets. This book examines the reasons for disclosure regulation and how the efficient operation of financial markets is dependent on disclosure. It examines the adequacy of common law and civil law concerning broker-client disclosure and concludes that industry licensing in itself fails to keep the market informed. While recognizing the failures of securities commissions to achieve good disclosure in financial markets, it confirms the effectiveness of coregulation of disclosure by a commission with the support of the financial markets such as the stock exchange. Coregulation builds on financial market self-regulation and is best described in the words of one-time SEC

Roslender, Richard M.S. Wilson, 2013-09-13 When marketing managers and financial managers join forces within any business the result can often be poor communication on financial criteria and goals The risk of this situation occurring is inevitably present when those with different professional backgrounds and roles are working in accordance with their own norms In his seminal 1956 paper on general systems theory the economist Kenneth Boulding referred to the phenomenon of specialised ears and generalised deafness which can be seen to exist when marketing managers are financially illiterate or when financial managers lack the necessary insights to design implement and operate accounting systems which are useful to marketing managers in carrying out their roles It is increasingly difficult to attach credence to the idea of marketing managers who lack financial skills or financial managers who fail to relate to the context in which marketing managers operate Understanding the marketing accounting interface is therefore important in generating emergent properties from the interaction of marketers and accountants whereby the whole is greater than the sum of the parts The chapters in this volume seek to address this challenge This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Marketing Management Consumer Energy Atlas, 1980 Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 2009 United States.
