MontiArc - Architectural Modeling and Simulation of Interactive Distributed Systems Arne Haber, 2016-09-02 Formal ADLs offer great potential to analyse the architecture of a system predict the overall performance by using simulations and allow to automatically generate parts of the implementation Nevertheless ADLs are rather not used in industrial practice since several problems hinder to exploit their potential to the full extent This thesis elaborates the design of an ADL that copes with these impediments of ADLs in practice Therefore the design of a lightweight ADL is derived which also provides well defined extension points to be adapted to a certain domain or development process Furthermore it is investigated how architectural modeling can be enriched with agile development methods to support incremental modeling and the validation of system architectures Therefore a set detailed of requirements for architectural modeling and the simulation of system architectures is defined and MontiArc a concrete ADL to model logical architectures of distributed interactive systems is derived The language is based on the mathematical FOCUS BS01 framework which allows to simulate modeled systems in an event based style Code generators and a simulation framework provide means to continuously refine and test architectural models To add new features or adapt the language to a new domain a corresponding language extension method is presented to extend the syntax language processing tools and code generators of the ADL A lightweight model library concept is presented which allows to develop and reuse component models and their implementation in a controlled and transparent way The developed language the simulator and the language extension techniques have been examined in several case studies which either used or extended MontiArc

Surveillance Systems Busyairah Syd Ali, 2017-11-06 The Communication Navigation and Surveillance CNS systems provide air traffic controllers with the information necessary to ensure the specified separation between aircraft and efficient management of airspace as well as assistance to flight crew for safe navigation. However, the radar systems that support air traffic management ATM and in particular air traffic control ATC are at their operational limit. This is particularly acute in the provision of the ATC services in low altitude remote and oceanic areas. Limitations in the current surveillance systems include unavailability of services in oceanic and remote areas, limited services during extreme weather conditions, and outdated equipment with limited availability of spare parts to support system operation. These limitations have resulted in fatal accidents. This book addresses the limitations of radar to support ATC in various operational environments identified and verified by analysing five years of safety data from Avinor, the Air Navigation Service Provider ANSP in Norway. It derives a set of taxonomy and from this develops a causal model for incident/accident due to limitations in the surveillance system. The taxonomy provides a new method for ANSPs to categorize incidents, while the causal model is useful for incident/accident investigations. The book also provides theoretical justifications for the use of Automatic Dependent Surveillance Broadcast ADS-B to overcome the limitations of radar systems and identify areas of improvements to enable seamless ATC services. Written in a style that makes it accessible to non-specialists, Aircraft Surveillance Systems will be of interest to many in the field of aviation, particularly ATM safety and accident/incident investigation. It will also offer a useful reference on this vital topic for air traffic management courses.
