Writing for Social Scientists Howard S. Becker, 2008-11-15 Students and researchers all write under pressure and those pressures most lamentably the desire to impress your audience rather than to communicate with them often lead to pretentious prose academic posturing and not infrequently writer's block Sociologist Howard S. Becker has written the classic book on how to conquer these pressures and simply write First published nearly twenty years ago Writing for Social Scientists has become a lifesaver for writers in all fields from beginning students to published authors Becker's message is clear in order to learn how to write take a deep breath and then begin writing Revise Repeat It is not always an easy process as Becker wryly relates Decades of teaching researching and writing have given him plenty of material and Becker neatly exposes the foibles of academia and its publish or perish atmosphere Wordiness the passive voice inserting a the way in which when a simple how will do all these mechanisms are a part of the social structure of academic writing By shrugging off such impediments or at the very least putting them aside for a few hours we can reform our work habits and start writing lucidly without worrying about grades peer approval or the literature In this new edition Becker takes account of major changes in the computer tools available to writers today and also substantially expands his analysis of how academic institutions create problems for them As competition in academia grows increasingly heated Writing for Social Scientists will provide solace to a new generation of frazzled would be writers

Territorial Change and Conflict in Indonesia Ratri Istanita, 2022-12-30 This book focuses on Indonesia and investigates why competition between various identity affiliated groups to claim a new province increases conflict severity It includes a quantitative study along with complementary case studies of provinces in Indonesia which provide evidence that group fragmentation plays a role in determining conflict during a new province's struggle. Against the background of the Indonesian government's territorial autonomy (TA) strategy, regional proliferation or pemekaran, the author examines the long-term decentralization project in Indonesia, which has an ethnically and religiously divided population. The book provides answers to the questions of how the new province claim increases conflict in the supporting districts and how competition among diverse elites in districts pursuing a new province precipitate conflict within the region. Based on extensive field research, the four case studies of districts with varying degrees of conflict reveal that the campaign for a new province proliferation increases the probability of conflict at the district level and conflict can escalate during the initiation of a new province stage. The author argues that more provinces may be necessary to ensure the fair distribution of wealth that would enable the whole population to enjoy a similar quality of life and that the Indonesian government needs to wisely and strategically uphold its unity if a federal arrangement is not an option. Offering a novel contribution to the study of the relationship between territorial change and conflict in Indonesia, this book will be of interest to academics studying Indonesian politics, Southeast Asian politics, as well as identity and ethnic politics.

Environmental Communication and Community Tarla Rai Peterson, Hanna Ljunggren Bergeå, Andrea M. Feldpausch-Parker, Kaisa Raitio, 2016-04-28 As society has become increasingly aware of environmental issues, the challenge of structuring public participation opportunities that strengthen democracy while promoting more sustainable communities has become crucial for many natural resource agencies, industries, interest groups, and publics. The processes of negotiating between the often disparate values held by these diverse groups and formulating and implementing policies that enable people to fulfil goals associated with these values can strengthen communities as well as tear them apart. This book provides a critical examination of the role communication plays in social transition through both construction and destruction of community. The authors examine the processes and practices put in play when people who may or may not have previously seen themselves as interconnected communicate with each other, often in situations where they are competing for the same resources. Drawing upon a diverse selection of case studies on the American, Asian, and European continents, the chapters chart a range of approaches to environmental communication, including symbolic construction, modes of organising, and agonistic politics of communication. This volume will be of great interest to researchers, teachers, and practitioners of environmental communication, environmental conflict, community development, and natural resource management.

Writing Ethnographic Fieldnotes Robert M. Emerson, Rachel I. Fretz, Linda L. Shaw, 1995-01 In this companion volume John van Maanen s Tales of the Field three scholars reveal how the ethnographer turns direct experience and observation into written fieldnotes upon which an ethnography is based Drawing on years of teaching and field research experience the authors develop a series of guidelines suggestions and practical advice about how to write useful fieldnotes in a variety of settings both cultural and institutional Using actual unfinished working notes as examples they illustrate options for composing reviewing and working fieldnotes into finished texts They discuss different organizational and descriptive strategies including evocation of sensory detail synthesis of complete scenes the value of partial versus omniscient perspectives and of first person versus third person accounts Of particular interest is the author s discussion of notetaking as a mindset They show how transforming direct observations into vivid descriptions results not simply from good memory but more crucially from learning to envision scenes as written A good ethnographer they demonstrate must learn to remember dialogue and movement like an actor to see colors and shapes like a painter and to sense moods and rhythms like a poet The authors also emphasize the ethnographer s core interest in presenting the perceptions and meanings which the people studied attach to their own actions They demonstrate the subtle ways that writers can make the voices of people heard in the texts they produce Finally they analyze the processing of fieldnotes the practice of coding notes to identify themes and methods for selecting and weaving together fieldnote excerpts to write a polished ethnography This book however is more than a how to manual The authors examine writing fieldnotes as an interactive and interpretive process in which the researcher's own commitments and relationships with those in the field inevitably shape the character and content of those fieldnotes They explore the conscious and unconscious writing choices that produce fieldnote accounts And they show how the character and content of these fieldnotes inevitably influence the arguments and analyses the ethnographer can make in the final ethnographic tale This book shows that note taking is a craft that can be taught Along with Tales of the Field and George Marcus and Michael Fisher's Anthropology as Cultural Criticism Writing Ethnographic Fieldnotes is an essential tool for students and social scientists alike

Tales of the Field John Van Maanen, 2011-07 Once upon a time ethnographers returning from the field simply sat down shuffled their note cards and wrote up their descriptions of the exotic and quaint customs they had observed Today scholars in all disciplines are realizing how their research is presented is at least as important as what is presented Questions of voice style and audience the classic issues of rhetoric have come to the forefront in academic circles John Van Maanen an experienced ethnographer of modern organizational structures is one who believes that the real work begins when he returns to his office with cartons of notes and tapes In Tales of the Field he offers readers a survey of the narrative conventions associated with writing about culture and an analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of various styles He introduces first the matter of fact realistic report of classical ethnography then the self absorbed confessional tale of the participant observer and finally the dramatic vignette of the new impressionistic style He also considers more briefly literary tales jointly told tales and the theoretically focused formal and critical tales Van Maanen illustrates his discussion of each style with excerpts from his own work on the police Tales of the Field offers an informal readable and lighthearted treatment of the rhetorical devices used to present the results of fieldwork Though Van Maanen argues ultimately for the validity of revealing the self while representing a culture he is sensitive to the differing methods and aims of sociology and anthropology His goal is not to establish one true way to write ethnography but rather to make ethnographers of all varieties examine their assumptions about what constitutes a truthful cultural portrait and select consciously and carefully the voice most appropriate for their tales Written with grace and humor Tales of the Field will be an invaluable introduction to novices just learning the fieldwork trade and provocative stimulant to veteran ethnographers Engaging and well written H
