

VSAT Installation

Installation of a VSAT system can be a challenge unless the installer has considerable experience in performing the task. An experienced installer will be able to unpack the equipment, assemble the antenna, modem and transceiver, line up the satellite and get a signal lock in 2 to 7 working days.

There are several stages involved in building a VSAT facility:

1. Inspection of the VSAT equipments
2. Preparation of the site for VSAT installation
3. VSAT equipment installation
4. VSAT antenna alignment
5. Commissioning and start of VSAT service

Step 1. Inspect the VSAT equipment

If the equipment has been purchased from several different vendors, small items like cables may not have been provided.

The installer must perform a full inspection of the equipment immediately upon its arrival; any missing items can be identified and ordered while the initial work of installation is proceeding.

E-3 Site preparation

Professional installer begins assembly of an Andersen 4.5m

Step 2. Preparation of the antenna site

The installer will contact the EUMETSAT teleport & satellite operator in order to get the settings for the azimuth, which is the compass bearing from the client's location to the satellite, and the elevation, which is the angle in an upward direction that is necessary for the antenna to hit the satellite.

This information will confirm that there are no trees, buildings or other obstructions that prevent the antenna from having a clear view of the satellite.

The antenna site must be positioned conveniently close to the main building that will house the electronics and provide the electrical power to the antenna.

Larger antennas need special concrete pads built for them, but the smaller antennas of 3.5m or less can often sit on the roof of a building or on a firm flat piece of ground.
