

Structure of DNA Fingerprinting Lab Report

Your assignment is to write a journal lab report consisting of Materials and Methods, Results and Discussion (not discussed in part 1). Before it, a description of what your report should contain and how it should be organized. We will include the practice section that covered using the microcentrifuge and the practice section for loading/loading the gel in your report. Also, we will give general descriptions of how restriction enzymes or gel electrophoresis work, as these would provide an introduction. Your report should be appropriate for 12 pages long, double-spaced, and have 1" margins left and right margins and 1" top and bottom margins. Spelling, grammar and quality of writing will count!

Title page

- Include a meaningful, original title followed by your name, the lab date, course name, section number and the name of your lab partner.

Materials and Methods

Describe exactly how the experiment was conducted in a narrative form. Use numbers, words. We will give the procedure from the lab section as methods (but all numbered steps). Describe the various steps: adding restriction enzyme buffer with the appropriate and reaction in buffer, your work, the thorough that mixture, do not overloading the results with minor details. Write in the past tense and use the present tense for the materials and the results. Buffer your discussion from Figure 1 through 4.2. The course the report, if it is "here". Use additional details, discussion further requires the section. (This section should be 12-15 pages long)

- Describe the restriction enzyme digestion, including any variations.
- Describe loading, loading, and loading the gel, including any variations.
- Describe running the gel.
- Describe the analytical method used (restriction of DNA bands).
- Include a table similar to Table 4.2 and refer to it in your text.

Results

Describe the results of your experiment. Include a picture showing of the gel with the loading pattern and observed. Refer to the figure in numbers, but a table and figures are in clearly labeled and referred to in the text. Suppose that there is a narrative form for example, "Figure 1 shows that the second, third and fifth bands from the top to have 12 bands above to have 12" or "There are no bands in something between between at the 12th to 14th bands and the 14th to 16th bands" (Fig. 1.2). Include the following in your results:

- Comparison of bands - compare DNA as either a set sample (1.2)
- Comparison of bands - compare DNA as either a set sample (1.2)

On each page, include the following information: Refer to the first section, (This section, and including results, should be 12-15 pages long.)

Ethics in Forensic Science J.C. Upshaw Downs,Anjali Ranadive Swienton,2012-03-26 The word ethical can be defined as proper conduct A failure of forensic scientists to act ethically can result in serious adverse outcomes However while seemingly simple to define the application of being ethical is somewhat more obscure That is when is ethical ethical and when is it not Because we have an adversarial legal system differences of opinion exist in forensic science However there are instances when differences are so divergent that an individual s ethics are called into question In light of not only the O J Simpson trial the first national trial to question the ethical behavior of forensic scientists and the National Academy of Science critique of forensic science ethical issues have come to the forefront of concern within the forensic community Ethics in Forensic Science draws upon the expertise of the editors and numerous contributors in order to present several different perspectives with the goal of better understanding when ethical lines are crossed In order to achieve this goal comparisons of various canons of ethics from medicine law science religion and politics will be examined and applied Lastly case studies will be presented to illustrate ethical dilemmas and provide a real world context for readers Edited by a well known forensic attorney consultant and a leading medical examiner Ethics in Forensic Science addresses the concerns of the entire forensic community the laboratory medical examiner and crime scene investigator It will be an invaluable reference for practitioners in forensic and or criminal justice programs crime scene investigators photographers law enforcement training centers police academies and local agencies as well as forensic consultants and forensic scientists

The Human Genome Diversity Project
Amade M'Charek,2005-01-20 The Human Genome Diversity Project HGDP was launched in 1991 by a group of population geneticists whose aim was to map genetic diversity in hundreds of human populations by tracing the similarities and differences between them It quickly became controversial and was accused of racism and bad science because of the special interest paid to sampling cell material from isolated and indigenous populations The author spent a year carrying out participant observation in two of the laboratories involved and provides fascinating insights into daily routines and technologies used in those laboratories and also into issues of normativity standardization and naturalisation Drawing on debates and theoretical perspectives from across the social sciences M Charek explores the relationship between the tools used to produce knowledge and the knowledge thus produced in a way that illuminates the HGDP but also contributes to our broader understanding of the contemporary life sciences and their social implications
