A brand is a name, form, design, symbol or any other feature that distinguishes one entity's good or service from those of other entities.

Branding

A brand is a name, form, design, symbol or any other feature that distinguishes one entity's good or service from those of other entities. Brands are visible features, including, and extending far beyond, any opportunity to create and share value as brand equity for the object identified, as the result of the brand's contribution to create and share value. Brand equity is a company's distinctive brand features and attributes distinguished from others in the market.

The practice of branding – in the design field is known as branding – is thought to have begun with the ancient Egyptians, who are known to have employed a trademark, branding as early as 1,500 BCE. Branding was used to differentiate one person's cattle from another's by means of a distinctive symbol burned into the animal's skin with a hot branding iron.

A common philosophy of the cattle, anyone else who saw the symbol could deduce the animal owner. This fact has been extended to create a strategy, particularly for a product or company, as their "brand" name suggests the value and benefits that a company may provide and how they fit into the world and the society of the business.

Over time, the position of branding evolved, influenced by a broader range of marketing and product offerings, including oil, wine, cosmetics, and fast food and in the 20th century, animals were further into various such as dogs, horses and livestock, political parties and people (e.g. Lady Gaga and Katy Perry). Branding in terms of painting a cow with symbols or colors of how markets was created and it is for one of the oldest forms of the practice.

Components

Branding, consistently that form a brand's features include a brand's identity, personality, product design, brand communication, such as its logo and trademark, brand personality, brand equity, and various branding brand management strategies. Many companies believe that there is often little to differentiate between several types of products in the 21st century, hence branding is among a few remaining forms of product differentiation.

Branding is the immediate identity of a brand's worth and is achieved by identifying the different parts of brand identity components. As markets become increasingly dynamic and marketing brand equity is built by the development of marketing techniques to increase customer satisfaction and customer loyalty, with one effect is the reduced price sensitivity.
