

Behind Apple.

Last Thanksgiving, a designer from Lynn, Ohio Corporation took one of the company's Apple Personal Computers home for the holidays.

While he was out eating turkey, it got baked.

His cat, perhaps misled at being left alone, knocked over a lamp which started a fire which, among other unpleasantities, melted his TV set all over his computer. He thought his goose was cooked.

But when he took the Apple to Cincinnati Computer Store, miracle done, it still worked.

A new case and keyboard made it as good as new.

Nearly 6000 Apple dealers have complete service centers that can quickly fix just about anything that might go wrong, no matter how bizarre.

If it isn't looking for a personal computer that solves problems instead of creating them, look to your authorized Apple dealer.

You'll find everything well done.

I don't believe the cleverest ads placed have appeared headlines. It's not this ad. It's 1981, welcoming IBM to the personal computer market. Somewhat like Belgium welcoming home to the border. Or wait. The client is not that sure. Though Apple was shy at the time, this ad places a new home here out of a heavily forested area, and Apple II's have become the town highlighted.

The biggest selling Apple's latest personal sold in 1981 will only be this — that names of how Apple responded to this people's hope — without the line and before, speeds and feeds featured in most computer ads.

Welcome, IBM. Seriously.

Welcome to the most exciting and important marketplace since the computer revolution began 35 years ago.

And congratulations on your first personal computer.

Putting real computer power in the hands of the individual is already improving the way people work, think, learn, communicate and spend their leisure hours.

Computer literacy is fast becoming as fundamental a skill as reading or writing.

When we invented the first personal computer system, we estimated that over 140,000,000 people worldwide could justify the purchase of one, if only they understood its benefits.

Next year alone, we project that well over 1,000,000 will come to that understanding. Over the next decade, the growth of the personal computer will continue in logarithmic leaps.

We look forward to responsible competition in the massive effort to distribute this American technology to the world. And we appreciate the magnitude of your commitment.

Because what we are doing is increasing social capital by enhancing individual productivity.

Welcome to the task
