sub Saharan Africa in the early 1990s This book provides a very timely investigation into the progress and setbacks over that period the challenges that remain and the prospects for future democratization in Africa It commences with an overall assessment of the lack of progress made from 1990 to 2010 exploring positive developments with reasons for caution Based on original research subsequent contributions examine various themes through country case studies inclusive of the routinisation of elections accompanied by democratic rollback and the rise of hybrid regimes the tenacity of presidential powers the dilemmas of power sharing ethnic voting and rise of a violent politics of belonging the role of donors and the ambiguities of democracy promotion Overall the book concludes that steps forward remain greater than reversals and that typically though not universally sub Saharan African countries are more democratic today than in the late 1980s Nonetheless the book also calls for more meaningful processes of democratization that aim not only at securing civil and political rights but also socio economic rights and the physical security of African citizens This book was originally published as a special issue of Democratization

Democracy and Political Culture in Eastern Europe Hans-Dieter Klingemann, Dieter Fuchs, Jan Zielonka, 2006-11-22 What is the relationship between democracy and political culture in countries undergoing major systemic change Have subjective political orientations of citizens been important in shaping the development of democracy in central and eastern Europe after the fall of communism These core questions are tackled by an impressive range of twenty political scientists sixteen of which are based in the central and eastern European countries covered in this essential new book Their analyses draw on a unique set of data collected and processed by the contributors to this volume within the framework of the World Values Survey project This data enables these authors to establish similarities and differences in support of democracy between a large number of countries with different cultural and structural conditions as well as historical legacies The macro level findings of the book tend to support the proposition that support of democracy declines the further east one goes In contrast micro level relationships have been found to be astonishingly similar For example support of democracy is always positively related to higher levels of education no matter where an individual citizen happens to live This new book builds a clear understanding of what makes democracies strong and resistant to autocratic temptation
