Ecosystem Services and Global Trade of Natural Resources Thomas Koellner,2013-06-17 The utilization of natural resources to satisfy worldwide growing consumption of goods and services has severe ecological consequences. Aside from the projected doubling of food consumption in the next fifty years, the growing trade of biofuels and other commodities is a global challenge as the economic activities in the primary sector, i.e. mining, fisheries, aquaculture, forestry, and agriculture, can damage biodiversity and ecosystem services. This should be taken into account in the decision making affecting the global value chains linking consumer, retailer, processor, and producer in the North and the South. To cover the topic of ecosystem services and global trade, this book is organized into four major parts. Part 1 gives the theoretical framework from an ecological, economic, and political perspectives. Part 2 explores how internationally traded biophysical commodities from agriculture, forestry, and fisheries translate into a virtual flow of land, freshwater, and marine ecosystems. Part 3 describes how two widely used accounting tools, i.e. Life Cycle Assessment and Green National Accounts, deal with international aspects of ecosystem services, and Part 4 shows how instruments like labelling, bans, or payments for ecosystem services in the private and public sector can influence trade patterns and the management of ecosystem services. This collection is a valuable contribution to the global change science dealing with ecosystem services. It illustrates the consequences of international trade on global ecosystem services and provides an overview of accounting tools and of market-based policy instruments to address negative and positive externalities. The book is certainly innovative because it brings together research findings from distinct disciplines, especially Industrial Ecology and Ecosystem Sciences, as well as Environmental Economics and Political Science.

The Palgrave Handbook of International Trade and Development in Africa Matthew Kofi Ocran, Joshua Yindenaba Abor, 2024-11-06

This book explores the intricate activities and systems that underpin international trade and development in Africa. The relationship between trade and economic performance is analysed with a particular emphasis on financial development, trade liberalization and the welfare implications of FTA. A critical reflection of international trade and development in Africa is provided that highlights how institutions that govern the international trade system largely found in the Global North have enabled developed countries to benefit most from African trade. Emerging issues such as FDI, the COVID 19 pandemic, the gendered nature of trade remittances and digital trade are also discussed. This book aims to examine how Africa can play a more active role in international trade and how the trade systems can be altered to help drive economic growth and development in Africa. It will be relevant to students and researchers interested in development and African economics.
