Introduction

Human behavior is a product of many interrelated factors (Hartwell 7). Friends, environment, and culture influence our behaviors (Kierkus 50). In this article, three variables that are closely connected with our everyday life are highlighted. They are music, media, and culture. Later, a hypothesis that music, media, and culture influence aggressive behavior is developed. An understanding about the issue is vital because it enables persons to effectively manage aggression and reduce its adverse impacts (Jost 108).

Literature review

Many scholars have analyzed the effects resulting from the above factors. However, they still have not come to the irreversible decision. In this study, we refer to the works of the researchers who have examined the influence of music, media, and culture on aggressive human behavior.

Tropeano asserts that violence lyrics or music influence aggressive behaviors among their listeners (Tropeano 30). According to the researcher, music contents encouraging violence enhance negative feelings and views, which can result in aggression.

She also suggests that music comprising of violent lyrics, aggressive behaviors, and demeaning views toward women did make a person feel and react more violently (Tropeano 31). Based on her studies, it is apparent that a person's musical tastes have a huge effect on his or her behavior. The above findings support our hypothesis.

Murdock claims that there is a cumulative substantiation that increased exposure to media violence is a leading cause for the escalation of aggression (Murdock 242).

He postulates that men who were high TV-violence audiences as teenagers were considerably more likely to have exhibited violent behaviors, pushed their wives, or convicted of misconduct. According to the study, such men had been sentenced for Violence Against Women provides cutting edge information on the various studies conducted on North American campuses. This compelling book not only provides a strong overview of the entire field but also simultaneously offers an answer to backlash critics who claim that feminists exaggerate their statistics. Several of the best known researchers describe their own work and that of others to illustrate both large scale and local studies. The contributors also take a compelling look into the emotions of sexual assault research by discussing their own emotional experiences of working with rape research including experiences of harassment by subjects or disrespect by colleagues. In addition several scholars peruse empirical and epistemological questions and arrive at surprising conclusions on feminist participatory research into lesbian battering, reflexivity in studying prostitutes, the gendered nature of research interviews and white women studying battered women of color. Including chapters on very hot topics and celebrating feminist research methodology, Researching Sexual Violence Against Women speaks to a broad audience including researchers, academics, professionals and students in the areas of interpersonal violence, social work, sociology, criminology, women's studies, psychology, family studies and counseling as well as college administrators and mental health practitioners.

Researching Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence Claire McLoone-Richards, 2023-08-25. This book offers a critical examination of the ethical and moral challenges in conducting research about domestic abuse or sexual violence from the perspectives of student practitioners and novice researchers within various professional disciplines, offering rich insights based on the experiences of each author. Including the research expertise of academics in this field and importantly the experiences of student practitioners in conducting their research, the book explores practice informed research and research informed practice in relation to the examination of a range of issues and themes related to DA and SV. All contributors consider the challenges and reflect on the salient issues related to their ethical research and with some of the research conducted during the global pandemic of COVID 19 they also reflect on these additional challenges and how they sought to address them. The reader is invited to consider the different national and international gendered cultural and social contexts of DA and SV from early childhood to old age. With a constant thread of critical reflection they are encouraged to think about their own positionality to the unfolding discussions within each chapter and how these may relate to their professional practice, their research and their professional values. Overall the book sets out to:

1. articulate the dominant theoretical frameworks that have sought to offer explanations about domestic abuse and sexual violence within the research problems presented by the student practitioners
2. evaluate the significance of the legislation and policy provision within the UK in service provision and interventions for victims and perpetrators
3. showcase best practice examples of research studies on domestic abuse and sexual violence based on the experiences of student practitioners
4. promote a critical appraisal of the self and the positionality of the practitioner as researcher through reflection on their personal and professional development and
5. reflect on the impact of the shadow pandemic on the experiences of vulnerable individuals and the challenges of conducting research ethically and safely.

This is essential reading.

Understanding Peace Research Kristine Hoglund, Magnus Oberg, 2011-03-01

This textbook provides a comprehensive overview of different methods and sources of information gathering for peace and conflict students and researchers as well as the challenges presented by such work. Research on conflict-ridden societies carries special challenges for the collection and evaluation of information about the conflict and its actors. First, due to the nature of information, emerging incentives to misrepresent and propaganda is common. News coverage is sometimes poor and reporting is often incomplete, selective, and biased. Second, the sensitivity of the topic and the questions posed in peace and conflict research means that access to and the security of informants can be a problem. Peace and conflict research as a discipline encompasses a number of different approaches for obtaining empirical information which serve as a basis for analyzing various research topics. This book provides a comprehensive overview of different methods and sources of information gathering for students and researchers as well as the challenges presented by such work. It offers tools for evaluating sources and information, suggestions on where different types of information can be found, advice on using different types of sources including news reports and written narratives, practical guidelines for constructing large-scale datasets, insights and guidelines for comparative fieldwork, in-depth interviews, focus groups, and surveys, reflection and discussion on important ethical concerns in peace research. This book will be of much interest for students and researchers of peace and conflict studies, conflict resolution, war and conflict studies, development studies, security studies, and IR, as well as for NGO workers and researchers. Kristine Hoglund is Associate Professor at the Department of Peace and Conflict Research, Uppsala University. She has a PhD in Peace and Conflict Research from Uppsala University, Sweden, 2004. She is author of Peacemaking in the Shadow of Violence. Magnus Oberg is Associate Professor at the Department of Peace and Conflict Research, Uppsala University, and Associate Editor of the Journal of Peace Research since 2006. He has a PhD in Peace and Conflict Research from Uppsala University, 2003, and is co-editor of Resources, Governance and Civil Conflict (Routledge, 2008).
