

A radically new exploration of the ways we think about love, how it has been shaped, debated and reinvented by the West over nearly three millennia, and how we might more accurately – and successfully – connect to it.

'May could just have surveyed the seemingly impossible and produced a truly original philosophy of love. ... May is able to show us what is true in each age's perception of love, distill what is misleading, and synthesise the truth into the most persuasive account of love's nature I have ever read.'

—Financial Times

'Rich, provocative and illuminating.'

—Times Higher Education

'This book deserves to read, with Denis de Rougemont's classic Love in the Modern World. Readers ... will gain much from May's well-crafted study.'

—Edward's Journal

A powerfully demystifying critique, a challenging and ambitious theory of love that aims to show what it can and cannot mean in our lives.

—John Cleese

May's enquiry into the nature of love is an amazing tour de force: surprising, provocative, rethinking and instructive by turns, it surpasses everything I have written on this subject in its scope and ambition.'

—A.C. Grayling

Simon May is a senior lecturer in the Department of Philosophy at the University of York, and a senior research fellow at the Centre for the Study of Christianity and the Public Sphere at the University of York.
