Making Breaking The Law Macmillan:

Gender Power and Mediation Jamila A Chowdhury, 2012-11-30 This book investigates the practice of family mediation and some of the challenges that may hinder its effective use by marginalised groups in a society Those challenges include gendered power disparity and family violence especially towards women and the discussion extends to how the challenges can be overcome through a practice of evaluative mediation to provide fair outcomes for women Unlike other contemporary books on mediation this book not only discusses different theories of power and equity in mediation it also includes a number of verbatim quotes from different mediation sessions to demonstrate how those theories are operationalised in a real life context While other contemporary texts on mediation focus on Western style facilitative mediation and its limitations in attaining fair justice for women enduring gendered power disparity and family violence this text emphasises an evaluative mediation style that is embedded in Eastern social practices Instead of focusing on gendered power disparity and family violence as limitations on the practice of facilitative mediation this book details the practice of evaluative mediation which may provide fair justice to women despite the presence of gendered power disparity and family violence in a society

Contingency in International Law Ingo Venzke, Kevin Jon Heller, 2021-04-22 This book poses a question that is deceptive in its simplicity could international law have been otherwise Today there is hardly a serious account left that would consider the path of international law to be necessary and that would refute the possibility of a different law altogether But behind every possibility of the past stands a reason why the law developed as it did Only with a keen sense of why things turned out the way they did is it possible to argue about how the law could plausibly have turned out differently The search for contingency in international law is often motivated as it is in this volume by a refusal to resign to the present state of affairs By recovering past possibilities this volume aims to inform projects of transformative legal change for the future The book situates that search for contingency theoretically and carries it into practice across many fields with chapters discussing human rights and armed conflict migrants and refugees the sea and natural resources foreign investments and trade In doing so it shows how politically charged questions about contingency have always been
