Hemstock, 2019-11-28 This book

offers insights into the educational dimensions of climate change and promotes measures to improve education in this context. It is widely believed that education can play a key role in finding global solutions to many problems related to climate change. Indeed, education as a process not only helps young people to better understand and address the impact of global warming but also fosters better attitudes and behaviours to aid efforts towards mitigating climate change and adapting to a changing environment. But despite the central importance of education in relation to climate change, there is a paucity of publications on this theme. Against this background, the book focuses on the educational aspects of climate change and showcases examples of research projects and other initiatives aimed at educating various audiences. It also provides a platform for reflections on the role education can play in fostering awareness on a changing climate. Presenting a wide range of valuable lessons learned which can be adapted and replicated elsewhere, the book appeals to educators and practitioners alike.

Translating and Receiving Korean Media Jonathan Evans, Jinsil Choi, Kyung Hye Kim, 2025-07-01. In recent years, Korean culture has been incredibly successful internationally from the films of auteur directors like Bong Joon Ho's Parasite to shows like Squid Game and K-pop music. At the same time, media from the UK has also been successful in South Korea with popular shows such as Killing Eve and Life on Mars. Written by scholars working across translation studies, film and media studies, this volume examines the ways in which Korean media has been received and translated in the UK as well as how British media has fared in South Korea. Case studies explore how Korean media is re-packaged and categorised for a Western audience and how paratextual material, trailers, adverts, fan reactions, mediates films and shows for international audiences. The book also examines how the Korean remake of Life on Mars localises the British show, how Squid Game has been audio-described and how slower media models can suggest more sustainable forms of consumption and distribution. Demonstrating how interdisciplinary research can shed light on different aspects of global media culture, this volume will be essential reading for scholars and students working on the translation and international media circulation. It will especially appeal to readers interested in the interactions between British and Korean media. This work was supported by the Fund for International Collaboration and the Economic and Social Research Council grant number ES/W01081X/1.

Kate Bishop, Katina Dimoulas, 2024-07-01. Children and young people are often discussed as if they are homogenous groups. The reality is of course very different, with an enormous variation within each of these groups and in any domain of experience pertaining to childhood or adolescence. Driven by personal, sociocultural, geographic or economic circumstances, many children and young people worldwide are experiencing a totally different reality to those who fit with more mainstream patterns of childhood. This has substantial implications for their sociophysical environmental experience and our understanding of their physical environmental needs The aim of this book is to draw attention to these alternate realities for a number of these groups of children and young people highlighting the unique and different considerations associated with their particular circumstances in each instance and identifying the repercussions for their physical environmental needs Ultimately this book creates an evidence based discussion which can be used by designers planners and policy makers and those delivering services and programs to children and young people as a basis to make informed decisions on how to work with the groups of children and young people in our book for better environmental provision
