

A detailed illustration of a satellite in orbit above Earth. The satellite features a central cylindrical body with various instruments and a large, rectangular solar panel array extending horizontally. A prominent parabolic dish antenna is mounted on the side, pointing towards the viewer. The background shows the curvature of the Earth with white clouds against a deep blue sky.

address the theoretical and practical aspects of the challenging services industry and its economy. Services Science leverages methods, results, and knowledge stemming from these disciplines towards the development of its own concepts, methods, techniques, and approaches, thus creating the basis for true transdisciplinary gatherings and the production of transdisciplinary results. Services Science is building a concrete framework for transdisciplinary purposes. IESS10: the First International Conference on Exploring Services Science was the first international conference held in Europe in this domain. The conference took place during February 17-19, 2010, in Geneva, Switzerland. The goal of the conference was to build upon the growing community to further study and understand this emerging discipline. Academics, researchers, and practitioners of all disciplines were invited to contribute their results and approaches to Services Science in a transdisciplinary setting. In order to achieve the best possible mix of disciplines and their representation, the conference call for papers was structured around transdisciplinary service research topics, including service innovation, service exploration, service design, service engineering, and service sustainability, and around more disciplinary-oriented service contexts, such as sectors and services, IT, and services foundations of services science and governance and management.
