

Direct-Detection LADAR Systems

When a surface is illuminated by light, the way in which the energy is reflected depends on the surface. Rough targets scatter the incident electromagnetic energy diffusely, while smooth targets reflect the energy specularly. The amount of energy reflected depends on the wavelength of the illuminating signal.

When a surface is illuminated with longer-wavelength radiation, the amount of energy reflected also decreases. At the longest wavelengths, the largest amount of energy is reflected at the smallest angles. The amount of energy reflected also decreases as the target viewing angle changes. As the wavelength increases, the amount of energy reflected at the smallest angles also decreases.
