Land Stewardship through

Watershed Management Peter F. Ffolliott, Malchus B. Baker, Carelton B. Edminster, Madelyn C. Dillon, Karen L.

Mora, 2012-12-06 We must enhance the effectiveness of land stewardship and management of the world's natural resources to meet a growing global population's need for conservation, sustainable development and use of land, water and other natural resources. Ecosystem based multiple use land stewardship is necessary when considering the present and future uses of land, water and other natural resources on an operationally efficient scale. We need holistically planned and carefully implemented watershed management practices, projects and programs to accommodate the increasing demand for commodities and amenities, clear water, open space and uncluttered landscapes. An international conference in Tucson, Arizona from March 13 to 16, 2000 examined these needs and increased people's awareness of the contributions that ecosystem based multiple use watershed management can make to future land stewardship. The conference was sponsored by the School of Renewable Natural Resources, University of Arizona; the College of Agriculture, University of Arizona; the Rocky Mountain Research Station, USDA Forest Service; the Research Center for Conservation of Water Resources and Disaster Prevention, National Chung Hsing University, Taiwan; the Department of Forest Resources, University of Minnesota; the Center for Integrated Natural Resources and Agriculture Management, University of Minnesota; the Centro de Investigaciones Biológicas del Noroeste, Mexico; the International Arid Lands Consortium; the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service; the Bureau of Land Management of the Department of the Interior; the Salt River Project, Phoenix, Arizona; the Southern Arizona Chapter, Southwestern Section of the Society of American Foresters; and IUFRO Working Party 8.04.04 Erosion Control by Watershed Management. Watershed management in action Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2018-06-06

Watershed management has gained momentum over the past decade as a holistic way of conserving water, land and biodiversity resources while sustaining livelihoods. Based on 12 projects in Africa, Asia and Latin America, this publication looks at both the strengths and weaknesses of the approach and highlights the need for stronger governance and long term sustainability. Watershed Management Anup Kumar Mohanty, 2017-01-01 Among the various sustainable livelihood programmes designed for the overall development of the tribal people of the country, watershed development programme which started in the early 1990s is one of the important programmes. In this programme, a lot of money has been invested by various funding agencies for the holistic growth of the stakeholders, particularly in rainfed areas. This book minutely analysed the pros and cons of the watershed development programmes undertaken in Koraput district of Odisha. Koraput is one of the most backward districts of the country where the concentration of tribal population is more than half and the percentage of BPL population is as high as 87 percent. The impact analysis of these flagship programmes are very important for the policy makers, researchers and social workers. This book thoroughly examines the impact of the WDPs on the Economic, Social, Political and Environmental consequences of the programme on the people of rainfed areas of the district and also suggests suitable measures for improvement of the programme and making it more effective for sustainable livelihood for the tribal
