Ppi Poverty Probability Index:

Rural poverty analysis Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2021-10-26 Reducing rural poverty is a key objective of FAO To achieve this goal the Organization must reach the poor and the extremely poor in rural areas analysing their needs and aspirations and providing effective guidance for the design of policies and investments that foster inclusive and sustainable development This guide was developed to strengthen the Organization s work on rural poverty reduction and inclusivity over the coming years It provides key information to measure poverty characterize rural populations and identify their constraints to target them more accurately The guide includes five chapters Chapter 1 explains the structure content and use of the guide as well as its intended users and objectives Chapter 2 discusses how poverty is measured focusing on the different indicators that can be used depending on the context specific circumstances data availability and policy objectives Chapter 3 provides guidance on how to build a poverty profile and produce poverty maps to understand who the poor are and where they are located Chapter 4 focuses on the targeting process on various targeting techniques and on how to choose one over another to ensure that programmes and projects effectively combat poverty particularly in rural areas Finally Chapter 5 sets the next steps for the development of further analytical guides The various chapters provide an overview of both widely used and emerging techniques in poverty analysis focusing on quantitative methods and giving constant attention to FAO s areas of work and the challenges posed by operating in rural areas Agile Data-Oriented Research Tools to Support Smallholder Farm System Transformation James Hammond,Mark Van Wijk,Aniruddha Ghosh,Tim Pagella,Jacob Van Etten,2023-05-09 Smallholder farming systems contribute a substantial quantity of the food consumed in many lower and middle income countries and contribute to the national and local economies Despite the importance of smallholder farming a transformation is needed in order to deliver food security and decent incomes for the farmers themselves and at the national level This transformation must also be sustainable in terms of environmental impacts and social equity in order to be successful in the long term The pressures of population growth climate change and land fragmentation compound the problem Addressing these overlapping issues is a big challenge One obstacle is the lack of good quality granular data linking these issues together Household surveys are the workhorse method for gathering such data but there are well known problems that prevent household survey data from building up a big picture and delivering insights beyond the geographical boundary of each individual study Such obstacles include the lack of access to datasets differences in survey design and respondent biases Agile data oriented research tools can help to overcome these challenges We use the term agile to imply methods that do not attempt exhaustive measurements which are designed to be easy to use and which entail some degree of flexibility in terms of adaptation to local conditions and integration with other tools or methods Often these methods also nudge the behavior of tool users towards best practices In recent years various research tools and approaches have been published which fit within our definition of agile data oriented research tools The domains these tools function in include monitoring and evaluation intervention targeting tailored information delivery citizen science credit scoring and user feedback collection all with the over arching aim to improve data quality and access for those studying the sustainable development of smallholder farming systems The goal of this Research Topic is to better define that niche the ecosystem of tools and current practices and to explore how such approaches can provide the underpinning knowledge required for the transformation of smallholder farming systems One example of an agile data oriented research tool is the Rural Household Multi Indicator Survey RHoMIS It is a modular digital system for building household surveys addressing the common topics in smallholder development It was purposefully designed to give a broad overview of the farm system whilst keeping survey duration to a minimum to be user friendly in implementation and to be sufficiently flexible to function in a broad variety of locations and projects Since 2015 it has been used by 30 organizations in 32 countries to interview over 34 000 households The tool and database are open access and a community of practice is developing around the tool We particularly welcome contributions that engage with the RHoMIS tool and data However we also describe the tool in order to provide an example of what is meant by an agile data oriented research tool and welcome contributions focusing on other tools or methodologies We encourage the submission of manuscripts addressing the above topic and those which fit within one of the following three sub themes i Perspectives or review articles which explore the niche best practices or promising approaches in agile data oriented research tools for smallholder farm system transformation Also technology and code articles that describe new tools are welcomed ii Original research articles presenting analyses based on data derived from agile data oriented tools used at the project level Examples include impact evaluations adoption studies targeting studies or adaptive management and should reflect on the additional benefit leveraged by the agile method applied iii Original research articles that make use of the large amounts of data generated by such agile methods and or link between agile data and other data sources Examples include meta analyses of data from multiple studies layering data collected from different agile tools or linking agile data to remote sensing or large scale modeling outputs

External and internal migration propensity index (MPI) for Honduras: Out-of-sample validation Ceballos, Francisco, Hernandez, Manuel A., Hernandez, Alvaro Espinoza, 2025-02-21 The e MPI and the i MPI are tools to objectively estimate the probability that individuals from a given household will respectively migrate abroad or migrate domestically in the near future We use new longitudinal data to test their effectiveness fully out of sample We find good predictive power of each of these indices in terms of the respective type of migration they attempt to anticipate Moreover they perform well against alternative measures work reasonably well for both rural and urban areas and in departments not included in the original calibration data and appear to capture distinct aspects around households decisions to migrate domestically and abroad Overall the MPI seems to be an important addition to policymakers toolkit

The migration propensity index: An application to Guatemala Ceballos, Francisco, Hernandez, Manuel A., 2020-07-22 International migration has grown rapidly over the past two decades at an annual rate of 2.4% prompting increased interest in identifying the root causes of outmigration and the population groups more likely to emigrate. However, anticipating migration is a complex task as the decision to migrate is often determined by multiple push and pull factors that are typically interrelated and are not always directly observable. This study proposes the Migration Propensity Index (MPI), a novel approach to indirectly estimate a household's propensity or probability to emigrate. The central idea is to identify and keep track of a reduced set of household-level indicators that are strongly correlated with the latent decision of individuals to emigrate. Taken together and converted into an index, the combined indicators reflect the objective likelihood that one or more individuals from a given household will emigrate. The MPI is concise, easy to implement, and statistically rigorous and avoids asking direct sensitive questions about migration attempts or intentions, which are prone to refusals and underreporting. We calibrate the index to data for Guatemala, relying on an out-of-sample cross-validation procedure using a panel dataset of 2,798 households living in what are considered vulnerable municipalities. The data were collected in 2012, 2013, and 2014. We discuss the index design and implementation, including concrete examples of its application. The resulting model includes 12 simple variables and two location shifters and correctly identifies 93% of eventual emigrating and non-emigrating households. The MPI can serve policymakers in getting better insights into drivers of migration, monitor present and expected migratory flows, and for targeting of economic and social policies. Capitalist

Humanitarianism Lucia Hulsether, 2023-01-04. The struggle against neoliberal order has gained momentum over the last five decades to the point that economic elites have not only adapted to the Left's critiques but incorporated them for capitalist expansion. Venture funds expose their ties to slavery and pledge to invest in racial equity. Banks pitch microloans as a path to indigenous self-determination. Fair trade brands narrate consumption as an act of feminist solidarity with women artisans in the global South. In Capitalist Humanitarianism, Lucia Hulsether examines these projects and the contexts of their emergence. Blending historical and ethnographic styles and traversing intimate and global scales, Hulsether tracks how neoliberal self-critique creates new institutional hegemonies that in turn reproduce racial and neocolonial dispossession. From the archives of Christian fair traders to luxury social entrepreneurship conferences, from US finance offices to Guatemalan towns flooded with their loan products, from service economy desperation to the internal contradictions of social movements, Hulsether argues that capitalist humanitarian projects are fueled as much by a profit motive as by a hope that racial capitalism can redeem the losses that accumulate in its wake. Using multidimensional poverty and vulnerability indices to inform equitable policies and interventions in health emergencies, 2021-08-16 Financial Inclusion in Asia and Beyond Tony Cavoli, Rashesh Shrestha, 2021-03-04. The World Bank considers financial inclusion to be an enabler for at least 7 of the 17 United Nations sustainable development goals (SDGs). Financial inclusion, with its associated policy implications, is an important issue for ASEAN. This book examines the economic effects of financial inclusion. It explores issues surrounding measurement and impact of financial inclusion. The book looks at various salient topics, including measurement of financial inclusion the impact of various indicators of financial inclusion on development outcomes and macroeconomic volatility using aggregate data as well as the effects of financial inclusion on poverty and development outcomes using micro data

Moving from the Millennium to the Sustainable Development Goals Sefa Awaworyi Churchill, 2020-04-25 This book presents a collection of chapters that examine various dimensions of development Between 2000 and 2015 the Millennium Development Goals MDGs remained the overarching development framework that governed the international development community After a decade and half of commitment to the MDGs the framework is widely considered a success although progress reported across countries has been uneven The new overarching international development framework may not be successful or present the best opportunities for the desired global change without a better understanding of factors that contributed the most or the least to the attainment of the MDGs The chapters presented in this book provide discussions and insights into understanding these factors better They represent a collection of scholarship that address some of the important questions in international development They adopt a wide range of research methods to provide insight into what works and what does not in promoting the stipulated development goals

Promising indicators for effectively targeting the poor in Myanmar Myanmar Agriculture Policy Support Activity (MAPSA), The social protection system in Myanmar has remained at a rudimentary level for the past decade with policies scattered and fragmented across various government departments and serving only a fraction of the eligible population The government allocated only 0.8 percent of its expenditure to social protection constraining its ability to expand to vulnerable groups leaving households to rely on informal forms of safety nets against idiosyncratic and covariate shocks and life course contingencies Ni o Zaraz a Tarp 2021 Only 13.8 percent of the population received any form of social protection according to the 2017 MLCS leaving much of the poor which is about one third of the population out of the scope of protection After the military takeover in 2021 government provision of social protection faced a complete collapse with near zero allocation to the population MAPSA 2022c In the face of the double predicament of the COVID 19 pandemic and coup any form of anti poverty investment should effectively target the poor based on observable and verifiable characteristics In this research note we explore some promising indicators which can be used by implementing agencies to effectively target the poor We use data from the Myanmar Household Welfare Survey MHWS collected over the phone during July and August of 2022 The survey was conducted among 12 000 households in 310 townships of Myanmar The MHWS is a nationally urban rural and state region representative phone survey MAPSA 2022a The household survey questionnaire collected information on a wide variety of topics such as household composition occupation education dwelling characteristics assets income and agriculture
