

The Aim of Recruitment and Selection Report

The aim of the report is to analyze the most effective ways through which a firm's human resource department can undertake recruitment process. In addition, the report also evaluates the various selection methods used by the human resource department.

The Scope of Recruitment and Selection Report

The report is organized into a number of sections. The first section gives a comprehensive analysis of recruitment. The second part evaluates the selection process. Finally a conclusion and a set of recommendations are given.

Recruitment: Definition & Methodology

Recruitment refers to the process of identifying appropriate human resource with relevant skills and qualification to fit a particular post in an organization. Alternatively, recruitment can be defined as the process of attracting potential employee to an organization (Evers, Anderson & Voskuil, 2005, p.48).

The core purpose of recruitment and selection is to ensure that only the right person is appointed for the right job (Dale, p.1). The process is usually challenging especially in case of shortage within the labor market. Its inception and completion are marked by seeking new applicants and submission of applications within the stipulated time period.

The Need for Recruitment

There are a number needs which force an organization to consider recruiting. Some of them are outlined below.

Vacancies

Vacancies in an organization arise from various situations. Some of them include transfer, promotions, permanent disability of employees, labor turnover, termination and retirement. The resultant vacancies created require to be filled through effective recruitment (Dale, 2003, p.35).

Growth

Organizational growth is paramount if a firm is to succeed in the long term as a going concern entity. There are various strategies through which an organization can attain growth. Some of them include diversification and expansion of business
