Kontext von ERP-Systemen mittels agiler Prozesse und Methoden zu unterstützen und zu verbessern Verena Schönleitner, 2018 Viele Unternehmen benötigen ein Enterprise Resource Planning System ERP System um die Ressourcenverwaltung die Abbildung von geschäftlichen Prozessen beispielsweise die Lagerverwaltung und noch viele weitere Bereiche zu unterstützen und optimieren Jedes Unternehmen hat dabei individuelle Anforderungen die in einer spezifischen ERP System Lösung von einem Softwareunternehmen umgesetzt werden müssen Oftmals gestaltet sich der Prozess von der Analyse der Anforderungen bis zur Entwicklung und dem schlussendlichen Einsatz des ERP Systems als komplex und problematisch ERP Projekte werden heutzutage großteils mittels klassischer Vorgehensweisen wie zum Beispiel dem Wasserfallmodell umgesetzt Der Vorteil besteht darin dass sich das gesamte Projekt scheinbar gut planen lässt und Endtermine besser vorhergesagt werden können Allerdings müssen alle individuellen Anforderungen und Wünsche an das ERP System bereits zu Beginn des Projekts feststehen was sich in der Praxis schwer vollständig realisieren lässt Daher beginnen Softwareunternehmen welche ihre Projekte mit einer agile Vorgehensweise durchführen ERP Systeme auf eine flexible und

agile Art zu realisieren Als Thema dieser Masterarbeit wird ein agiles Softwareunternehmen betrachtet die Prozesse auf mögliche Schwachstellen hin analysiert und ein Konzept für eine bessere Umsetzung von ERP Projekten in einem agilen Umfeld entwickelt und bewertet Der Hauptfokus liegt dabei auf einem Soll Ist Vergleich Als Methodik werden dazu Befragungen ausgewählter Mitarbeiter des betrachteten Unternehmens durchgeführt analysiert und ausgewertet Um qualitativ hochwertige Ergebnisse zu erhalten werden unterschiedliche Rollen des Unternehmens für die Befragungen ausgewählt Many companies require an Enterprise Resource Planning ERP system to support and optimize resource management the mapping of business processes such as warehouse management and many other fields Every company has individual requirements that must be implemented in a specific ERP system solution by a software company Often the process from the analysis of the requirements to the development and final use of the ERP system is complex and problematic ERP projects are nowadays to a large extent implemented using classic procedures such as the waterfall model Using these methods might be seen still advantageous since they support in more strict and reliable planning and control including prediction of schedules and costs However all individual requirements for the ERP system must be fully determined and specified already at the beginning of the project aiming on realizing strictly all of them as primarily defined which often does not reflect practice Therefore software companies that carry out their projects with an agile approach are starting to implement ERP systems in a flexible and agile way The topic of this master thesis is a consideration of a specific agile software company the analyses of processes for possible weak points and the development and evaluation of a concept for a better implementation of ERP projects in an agile environment The main focus is on a target actual comparison of the applied agile methods As a methodology surveys of selected employees of the considered company are carried out analysed and evaluated In order to obtain high quality results different roles of the company are selected for the surveys
