Zimmerman, 2003-03-19 Using the right media archaeologists can and must educate and excite the people who need their information Larry Zimmerman's earnestly engaging guide to reporting archaeological findings argues that communication is one of archaeology's primary tasks. He offers advice on working with colleagues, identifying audiences, and creating dynamic, jargon-free prose. He offers easy pointers for developing and writing effective CRM reports, conference papers, and articles in general interest magazines. Students will benefit from Zimmerman's frank advice about citations and style, as well as his discussion of diverse audiences. Practicing archaeologists will learn much from the discussion of electronic media and new ways to reach non-academic audiences. Network Science in Archaeology Tom Brughmans, Matthew A.

Peeples, 2023-04-13 This is the first comprehensive guide to the archaeological uses of network science. Digital in Underwater Cultural Heritage Guzden Varinlioglu, 2016-04-26 One can argue that academia has always existed in an information age; however, as the general public gains access to ever more advanced systems, it can be claimed that areas of academia require updating to maintain vitality in today's world. When nautical archaeology produces inspiring reports, they are often at the hand of large budgets rather than general day-to-day dissemination. This book proposes using state-of-the-art, low-budget digital technology from the outset of surveys so that data may be recorded, analysed, and disseminated with seamless efficiency and great flair while employing progressively less decontextualized means. Further, it conveys a simple methodology that allows for data collection by teams of volunteer divers. Big data, rapid analysis, and cross-reference requirements have created a shift towards the need for advanced digital means, particularly relating to underwater archaeology where survey time is limited. This book logs several years of studies which respect in situ preservation where the limits of technology were stretched to the cutting edge, using novel collection methods to populate custom-built numerical and visual databases, generating 2D and 3D digital models, and further creating a Virtual Reality museum. These advances not only propel the function of academia but also promote the image of archaeology in an age where visualisation matters.

Why Did Ancient Civilizations Fail? Scott A. J. Johnson, 2016-09-19 Ideas abound as to why certain complex societies collapsed in the past, including environmental change, subsistence failure, fluctuating social structure, and lack of adaptability. Why Did Ancient Civilizations Fail? evaluates the current theories in this important topic and discusses why they offer only partial explanations of the failure of past civilizations. This engaging book offers a new theory of collapse: that of social hubris. Through an examination of Mesopotamian, Egyptian, Roman, Maya, Inca, and Aztec societies, Johnson persuasively argues that hubris blinded many ancient peoples to evidence that would have allowed them to adapt, and he further considers how this has implications for contemporary societies. Comprehensive and well-written, this volume serves as an ideal text for undergraduate courses on ancient complex societies, as well as appealing to the scholar interested in societal collapse. Big History and the Future of Humanity Fred Spier, 2011-01-18 Big History and the Future of Humanity presents an original theoretical approach that makes big history—the placing of the human past within the history of life on Earth and the Universe—accessible to general readers while revealing insights into what the future may hold for humanity. Provides an accessible and original overview of the entire sweep of history that places human history within the history of life on Earth.
