

—a diminutive conservative Democrat named Hugo Schiro, whom Johnson referred to as “Little”—the President decided to tour the flooded city. His motorcade stopped on a bridge spanning the Mississippi Canal, the eastern part of the city, and from the Presidential party saw whole neighborhoods all but flooded. They could see, according to the diary, that “people were walking along the bridge where they had disembarked from the boats that had brought them to dry land. Many of them were carrying the barest of possessions and many of them had been sitting on the ground waiting for the boats to come back for their families and carry them to dry land.” Johnson talked with a seventy-four-year-old black man, William Marshall and asked about what had happened and how he was getting along. As the conversation ended, Marshall said, “God bless you, Mr. President. God bless you.”

In the Ninth Ward, Johnson visited the George Washington Elementary School, on Poydras Avenue, which was being used as a shelter. “Most of the people on the inside of the building were Negro,” the diary reads. “... they did not believe that it was actually the President.” Johnson entered the crowded shelter in near-darkness; there were only a couple of flashlights to light the way. “This is your President!” Johnson announced. “I’m here to help you!” The diary describes the shelter as a “mass of human beings,” with people calling out for help “in terribly loud wails from voices of all ages. . . . It was a most ghastly sight of human and material destruction.” According to an article by the historian Edward F. Haas, published fifteen years ago in the Gulf Coast Historical Society, Johnson “... was surrounded by people who begged and asked him for food and water; one woman asked Johnson for a boat so that she could look after her two sons, who had been lost in the flood.” “Little May,” his is horrible,” Johnson said to Schiro. “I’ve never seen anything like this in my life.” Johnson assured Schiro that the resources of the federal government were “cut.”

President Schiro sent a sixteen-page telegram commending Johnson and the revival of New Orleans. “Please know,” Johnson wrote, “that my thoughts and prayers are with the thousands of Louisiana citizens who have

The death toll is sure to be many times as high and physical damage far more extensive and enduring. . . yet to see the city of New Orleans a week after the flood to see the ruin, was to be shocked much as Johnson was a year later. New Orleans “never had been a rising along St. Charles Street, though toxic puddles once belonged to the Mississippi River or Lake of the Gulf. . . . you saw a sign on a door read ‘Still here. Cooking a pot of dog gumbo.’ Another, pointing to a branch of the Whitney National Bank, read, ‘I was sleeping inside with a big dog, an ugly woman, two sons and a cat.’” If the hurricane had not hit, there would have been no left in town.

The last holdouts, especially the poorest among them, were a look of despair. They seemed to sense that they were now, with no savings, with no resources, meant to stay forever. On a display corner in the Ninth Ward, Johnson saw a curfew with an old woman who had been refused for more than a week. She wore a soiled hood. She was very old and could not have weighed more than seventy-five pounds. “I’ll be here to the end,” she said. There was a bottle of warm beer in a paper bag at her feet. She didn’t drink from it. She was just drinking the sun and the heat of the evening of her struggle. She was firm in her belief that all her neighbors, not just in Lafayette, Houston, Philadelphia, God knows where, were the lost ones. “Plain,” she said, “they’ve snatched me low and in a time of need. They’re jealous of me. I got forty-four dollars’ worth of meat in that icebox inside, and they ain’t gonna take it from me. Nobody gonna lock me out of my home.”

Although there were no looters now and very few accidents, the streets were still being patrolled in fantasy. —the New Orleans Police, New Orleans SWAT teams, the New York City Police Department, the Sacramento Police Department, the Greenbelt, Maryland police, private water contractors, the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, the 82nd Airborne National Guardsmen, San Diego lifeguards, Surf 21 Scientologists, and the pitchfork-wielding “Sobering Up” group. “assists” to the police.

The New Yorker Harold Wallace Ross,William Shawn,Tina Brown,David Remnick,Katharine Sergeant Angell White,Rea Irvin,Roger Angell,1927 The quiet contemporary American novel Rachel Sykes,2017-12-01 This book explores the concept of quiet an aesthetic of narrative driven by reflective principles and argues for the term s application to the study of contemporary American fiction In doing so it makes two critical interventions Firstly it maps the neglected history of quiet fictions arguing that from Hester Prynne to Clarissa Dalloway from Bartleby to William Stoner the Western tradition is filled with quiet characters Secondly it asks what it means for a novel to be quiet and how we might read for quiet in an American literary tradition that critics so often describe as noisy Examining recent works by Marilynne Robinson Teju Cole and Ben Lerner among others the book argues that quiet can be a multi faceted state of existence one that is communicative and expressive in as many ways as noise but filled with potential for radical discourse by its marginalisation as a mode of expression

The Rise and Fall of Communism Archie Brown, 2010-08-17 Winner of the 2010 W J M Mackenzie Prize for Best Political Science Book of the Year 2010 The relentless rise of Communism was the most momentous political development of the first half of the twentieth century No political change has been more fundamental than its demise in Europe and its decline elsewhere In this hugely acclaimed book Archie Brown provides an indispensable history that examines the origins of the ideology its development in different countries its collapse in many states following the Soviet perestroika and its current incarnations around the globe The Rise and Fall of Communism explains how and why Communists came to power how they were able in a variety of countries on different continents to hold on to power for so long and what brought about the downfall of so many Communist systems A groundbreaking work from an internationally renowned specialist this is the definitive study of the most remarkable political and human story of our times

Liberating the Will of Australia Geoffrey Burn, 2020-08-03 Why do many First People in Australia find themselves continually under siege Why do many interventions fail to produce what was hoped for Why is it that when there have been many positive developments at some deep level nothing seems to have changed Will the Uluru Statement from the Heart ensure the future security of the First Peoples in Australia By developing strands from Christian theology Liberating the Will of Australia answers these questions in a way that gets to the heart of the problem It is shown that the way that the First Peoples were treated by the first European in comers became an indelible part of what Australia currently is This explains why harm is often done even when good is intended and why some problems are too complex to solve But that does not mean that we need to be stuck in the past through deep repentance by the Subsequent Peoples much more than an apology we can take hold of the work of God to bring new things out of what is broken Ultimately this is profoundly hopeful Although focusing on Australia the theological tools developed can be applied in other colonial and post colonial contexts

Writing History in the Soviet Union Arup Banerji,2017-08-18 The history of the Soviet Union has been charted in several studies over the decades These depictions while combining accuracy elegance readability and imaginativeness have failed to draw attention to the political and academic environment within which these histories were composed Writing History in the Soviet Union Making the Past Work is aimed at understanding this environment The book seeks to identify the significant hallmarks of the production of Soviet history by Soviet as well as Western historians It traces how the Russian Revolution of 1917 triggered a shift in official policy towards historians and the publication of history textbooks for schools In 1985 the Soviet past was again summoned for polemical revision as part and parcel of an attitude of openness glasnost and in this literary figures joined their energies to those of historians The Communist regime sought to equate the history of the country with that of the Communist Party itself in 1938 and 1962 and this imposed a blanket of conformity on history writing in the Soviet Union The book also surveys the rich abundance of writing the Russian Revolution generated as well as the divergent approaches to the history of the period The conditions for research in Soviet archives are described as an aspect of official monitoring of history writing Another instance of this is the manner by which history textbooks have through the years been withdrawn from schools and others officially nursed into circulation This intervention occasioned in the present circumstance by statements by President Putin himself in the manner in which history is taught in Russian schools continues
