Visvikis, P.M. Panayides, 2017-10-09 This book focuses on the management of ship operations an activity that requires integrative knowledge and technical expertise that spans various disciplines As such ship operations personnel are expected to be well versed with aspects of management economics engineering technology and law Further ship operations management requires the ability to identify and neutralize threats and to manage risks and make decisions that will optimize costs and contribute to performance improvements Despite the fundamental nature of ship operations management no book has ever attempted to reconcile and compile a comprehensive body of knowledge while pursuing a coherent structured and systematic approach This edited volume addresses that fundamental gap in the extant literature and brings together a wealth of knowledge from experts in their respective fields Concretely it explores issues of organization technical management crewing and behavioral issues chartering and post fixture risk management finance legal aspects of international conventions and regulations attainment of safety security and marine insurance as well as ocean governance and sustainability As such the book offers a vital reference guide for maritime companies and organizations while also serving as a teaching supplement in academic and professional maritime programmes Proposed Merger of British Antarctic Survey and National Oceanography Centre Great Britain: Parliament:

House of Commons: Science and Technology Committee, 2013-02 In September 2012 the Natural Environment Research Council NERC announced a consultation process on proposals to merge the British Antarctic Survey and National Oceanography Centre It argued that there was a strong strategic case for the merger arising from scientific synergies between the organisations a drive to maximise the social and economic impact of scientific research output and a need to make the most cost effective use of marine and polar infrastructure A number of serious concerns have been raised about the prospect of merging the British Antarctic Survey and National Oceanography Centre and the way in which the consultation has been handled It s important that these concerns are addressed by NERC before any further action is taken NERC has not properly consulted on whether a merger is the best way to achieve its objectives and has not provided an adequate evidence base to support its case for a merger with the absence of projected cost savings being particularly notable In addition NERC

does not appear to have given adequate consideration to the British Antarctic Survey's geopolitical role when drafting its consultation proposals Nor has it demonstrated an awareness of UK political commitments on protecting the environment and polar regions in particular NERC should consider whether its aims could be achieved by means other than a merger Future consultations should be carried out with better engagement with scientists and other stakeholders British Shipping and Australia 1920-1939 K.
