

Chapter Two: Ecosystems: What They Are

2.1 Ecosystems: A Description

Biotic Communities

- I. The grouping of plants, animals, and microbes we see when we study a natural area is referred to as the area's biota or biotic community.
  - A. The plant portion of the biotic community includes all vegetation. The animal portion includes all creatures. Microbes encompass a large array of bacteria, fungi, and protozoans.
- II. The particular kind of biotic community found in a given area is, in large part, determined by abiotic (nonliving, chemical, and physical) factors, such as the amount of water present, the climate, or the type of soil in the area.
  - A. These abiotic factors both support and limit the particular community.

Species

- I. Species are different kinds of plants, animals, and microbes living in the community. A given species includes all those individuals that are like one another and are distinct from other groups.
  - A. Similarity in appearance suggests a close genetic relationship.
  - B. The biological definition of a species the entirety of a population that can interbreed and produce fertile offspring.

Populations

- I. Each species in a biotic community is represented by a certain population—that is, by a certain number of individuals that make up the interbreeding, reproducing group.
  - A. The distinction between a population and species is that population refers only to those individuals of a certain species that live within a given area, whereas species is all inclusive.

Associations

- I. The most basic kind of plant community is the association, defined as a plant community with a definite composition, uniform habitat characteristics, and uniform plant growth.
- II. The species within a community depend on one another. For example, certain animals will not be present unless certain plants that provide the necessary food and shelter are present.
  - A. Thus, the plant community supports or limits the animal community.
  - B. Every plant and animals species is adapted to cope with abiotic factors in the region.

Ecosystems

- I. An ecosystem joins together the biotic community and the abiotic conditions that it lives in.
  - A. An ecosystem is a dynamic complex of plant, animal, and microorganism communities and the nonliving environment interacting as a functional unit within an explicit place.

Ecological Ethics Patrick Curry,2011-07-12 In this thoroughly revised and updated second edition of the highly successful Ecological Ethics Patrick Curry shows that a new and truly ecological ethic is both possible and urgently needed With this distinctive proposition in mind Curry introduces and discusses all the major concepts needed to understand the full range of ecological ethics He discusses light green or anthropocentric ethics with the examples of stewardship lifeboat ethics and social ecology the mid green or intermediate ethics of animal liberation rights and dark or deep green ecocentric ethics Particular attention is given to the Land Ethic the Gaia Hypothesis and Deep Ecology and its offshoots Deep Green Theory Left Biocentrism and the Earth Manifesto Ecofeminism is also considered and attention is paid to the close relationship between ecocentrism and virtue ethics Other chapters discuss green ethics as post secular moral pluralism and pragmatism green citizenship and human population in the light of ecological ethics In this new edition all these have been updated and joined by discussions of climate change sustainable economies education and food from an ecocentric perspective This comprehensive and wide ranging textbook offers a radical but critical introduction to the subject which puts ecocentrism and the critique of anthropocentrism back at the top of the ethical intellectual and political agenda It will be of great interest to students and activists and to a wider public     The Perception of the Environment Tim Ingold,2000 An integrated approach to understanding how people live learn work in and perceive their environments     Storytelling Apes Mary Sanders Pollock,2015-05-04 The annals of field primatology are filled with stories about charismatic animals native to some of the most challenging and remote areas on earth There are for example the chimpanzees of Tanzania whose social and family interactions Jane Goodall has studied for decades the mountain gorillas of the Virungas chronicled first by George Schaller and then later more obsessively by Dian Fossey various species of monkeys Indian langurs Kenyan baboons and Brazilian spider monkeys studied by Sarah Hrdy Shirley Strum Robert Sapolsky Barbara Smuts and Karen Strier and finally the orangutans of the Bornean woodlands whom Birut Galdikas has observed passionately Humans are after all storytelling apes The narrative urge is encoded in our DNA along with large brains nimble fingers and color vision traits we share with lemurs monkeys and apes In Storytelling Apes Mary Sanders Pollock traces the development and evolution of primatology field narratives while reflecting upon the development of the discipline and the changing conditions within natural primate habitat Like almost every other field primatologist who followed her Jane Goodall recognized the individuality of her study animals defying formal scientific protocols she named her chimpanzee subjects instead of numbering them thereby establishing a trend For Goodall Fossey Sapolsky and numerous other scientists whose works are discussed in Storytelling Apes free living primates became fully realized characters in romances tragedies comedies and never ending soap operas With this work Pollock shows readers with a humanist perspective that science writing can have remarkable literary value encourages scientists to share their passions with the general public and inspires the conservation community     The Environment in Anthropology, Second Edition Nora Haenn,Richard Wilk,Allison Harnish,2016-04-26 Presents ecology and current environmental studies from an anthropological point of view The Environment in Anthropology presents ecology and current environmental studies from an anthropological point of view From the classics to the most current scholarship this text connects the theory and practice in environment and anthropology providing readers with a strong intellectual foundation as well as offering practical tools for solving environmental problems Haenn Wilk and Harnish pose the most urgent questions of environmental protection How are environmental problems mediated by cultural values What are the environmental effects of urbanization When do environmentalists goals and actions conflict with those of indigenous peoples How can we assess the impact of environmentally correct businesses They also cover the fundamental topics of population growth large scale development biodiversity conservation sustainable environmental management indigenous groups consumption and globalization This revised edition addresses new topics such as water toxic waste neoliberalism environmental history environmental activism and REDD Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation and it situates anthropology in the multi disciplinary field of environmental research It also offers readers a guide for developing their own plan for environmental action This volume offers an introduction to the breadth of ecological and environmental anthropology as well as to its historical trends and current developments Balancing landmark essays with cutting edge scholarship bridging theory and practice and offering suggestions for further reading and new directions for research The Environment in Anthropology continues to provide the ideal introduction to a burgeoning field

The Wrong Ape for Early Human Origins M. Kay Martin, 2023-04-11 The Wrong Ape for Early Human Origins examines ways in which the chimpanzee referential model has exerted a primary influence on evolutionary theory dominating portraits of proto and early human social life and in the broader sense of human nature itself Evidence on which this model is based is revisited along with new cross disciplinary findings that point to alternative scenarios for hominin phylogeny ecology and subsistence primeval kinship cognition and language and the respective roles played by aggression and cooperation as evolutionary drivers Recent advances in phylogenetics evolutionary biology and new additions to the fossil record are rendering linear monotypic models obsolete Contemporary theories on species divergence and change over time are shifting attention from ancient genotypes to factors that influence gene expression and from innate prescriptive behaviors to epigenesis and the capacity for behavioral plasticity This broader platform has the potential to fundamentally revise current notions about the basic nature phenotypic traits and lifeways of ancestral humans It informs a different profile of our progenitors one that reflects greater ecological bandwidth reliance on creative niche construction and hominin agency in the structuring of ancient reproductive and social groups

The Animal Question Paola Cavalieri, 2004 This book tackles the controversial question should human rights be granted to animals Cavalieri s defence of the rights of nonhuman animals questions the nature scope and language of contemporary ethics and the legal system
