

Apple's Iphone Launch: a Case Study in Effective Marketing

Kyle Mickalowski, Augustana College Mark Mickelson, Augustana College Jaciel Keltgen, Augustana College. When CEO Steve Jobs announced in January 2007 that Apple would be releasing a revolutionary iPhone five months hence, consumers waited with bated breath for a phone that would deliver all the features of their iPods as well as a smart phone. Anticipation grew, just as Jobs knew it would, as June approached. The launch would become one of the most heralded technological product splashes Apple, known for its masterful media build-up, had ever planned.

How the iPhone was developed, priced, promoted, and distributed is lesson for marketers around the world. Apple investors were pretty happy with the outcome as well. One year after Apple Inc. CEO Steve Jobs announced the company's industry-changing iPhone on January 9, 2007, at the Macworld convention in San Francisco, the share price of Apple's stock has more than doubled to a January 9, 2008, value of $179.40 (See Chart 1).

This stock price incorporates all of Apple's business, but a large part of the rise in value can be attributed to the launch of the cutting-edge iPhone, of which four million have already been sold through mid-January 2008 (Carew, 2008). Based on this simple observation of the stock price, the iPhone can so far be declared a success, at least from a shareholder standpoint. This paper will explore both the pre- and post-launch activities surrounding the iPhone to explain why it was such a success for the stockholders and why Apple's reputation for unparalleled marketing success is deserved.

One blogger (www.blogs.business2.com) was so interested in Apple's iPhone advertising schedule, he conducted a Nexis search for newspaper stories that mentioned the iPhone between June 23 and August 18, 2007. During that timeframe, Apple had aired nine new TV ads. The week the iPhone was launched, 1,547 stories appeared in the media, compared to 206 in mid August. Apple's advertising schedule appears to reinforce the iPhone's presence in media during times when the buzz or free media has tapered off.

This combination of paid and free media gives consumers the impression that the iPhone is constant presence in the popular media. One of the most influential periodicals dedicated to advertising, Advertising Age, in 2007 selected Apple as a runner-up for the annual Marketer of the Year award. This status was conveyed because of Apple's "rare accomplishment of successfully bringing a new product into an already crowded and competitive market. Apple's agreement with cellular telephone service provider AT&T gave it an upperhand in their relationship older cellular telephone firms have yet to acquire" (Bullik and Cuneo, 2007).

While Apple's advertising budget and schedule aren't readily available, Adweek's Andrew McMains estimated the Apple global account was worth $250 million in 2006 to agency TBWA Worldwide (2006). Other pundits have guessed that Apple will spend
