A guide for businesses

The country

Comprising almost the entire southern half of South America, Argentina is the world's eighth largest country, covering an area of 2.8 million square km. Argentina possesses some of the world's tallest mountains, expansive deserts, and impressive waterfalls, with the diversity of the land ranging from wild, remote areas in southern Patagonia to the bustling metropolis of Buenos Aires in the north.

One-third of the country's 40 million people live in Buenos Aires, the capital, which along with other urban areas accounts for almost 90% of the total population.

Argentina's culture has been greatly affected by its immigrant population. Argentina's Jewish population is the third largest Jewish community in the Americas (after that of the United States and Canada). When Argentina gained independence in 1816 thousands of Italians, Irish, Welsh, Germans, Poles and Ukrainians immigrated to the country, rooting many of today's Argentines in European ancestry.

Despite having South America's most turbulent political history, Argentina has still managed to be one of the continent's most successful nations.

Did you know...?

- There are complex taboos associated with pouring wine in Argentina. For example pouring with your left hand is an insult. As a visitor it is best to let your host do the pouring.
- Humour in Argentina can get very personal. It is not unusual for someone to ridicule your weight or wardrobe. This is merely a sign of affection rather than any serious personal attack.
- The Falklands should always be referred to as the Malvinas Islands – to call it anything else would open a political and historical can of worms.
