Vom Leben und Sterben im Alter Andreas Kruse, 2021-04-28. This book is concerned with people who are approaching the end of their lives as well as with the personal and professional caregivers who accompany them during this last stage. It describes attitudes and coping techniques among seriously or terminally ill people as well as the care support and environmental conditions that can help them shape the end of life in the best way possible in accordance with their own ideas. The author's aim in the book is to provide support for people in developing an accepting attitude towards the finiteness of life and in clearly articulating to their caregivers what their ideas of a good life are. This is a major work that places all end-of-life issues in a kinder, more serious and more confident light. Well worth reading for everyone in relation to their own life and for doctors, nurses, pastoral caregivers, counselors and all those voluntarily involved in providing humane care for seriously ill, very elderly and dying people. A book that is a wonderful read. Dr. Matthias Mettner, Director of Studies for Palliative Care and Organizational Ethics, Interdisciplinary Continuing Education, Switzerland, and Program Director of the Health and Medicine Forum, Zurich.

The Development of Criminal and Antisocial Behavior Julien Morizot, Lila Kazemian, 2014-12-02. This edited book summarizes the current state of knowledge on the development of criminal and antisocial behavior over the life course. It focuses mainly on the developmental perspective, which has had a paradigmatic influence on current theoretical and empirical works in criminology. With a multidisciplinary perspective, the book reviews the fundamental concepts of developmental criminology: b) the risk factors and developmental processes related to the most salient personal factors: e.g., genetics, personality and environmental factors; e.g., family, peers, school domains; explaining the development of criminal and antisocial behavior; c) the developmental issues related to a number of special themes: e.g., women's criminality, street gangs; and d) the applied and policy implications of research in developmental criminology. In each chapter, prominent researchers from different disciplines, such as criminology and psychology, summarize the state of knowledge on a specific topic, identify the shortcomings of past research, offer recommendations for future research needs.

Life Span Human Development Carol K. Sigelman, Linda De George, Kimberley Cunial, Elizabeth A. Rider, 2018-09-01. The third edition of Life Span Human Development helps students gain a deeper understanding of the many interacting forces affecting development from infancy, childhood, adolescence, and adulthood. It includes local, multicultural and indigenous issues and perspectives, local research in development, regionally relevant statistical information and National guidelines on health. Taking a unique, integrated, topical and chronological approach, each chapter focuses on a domain of development, such as physical growth, cognition or personality, and traces developmental trends and influences in that domain from infancy to old age. Within each chapter, you will find sections on four life stages: infancy, childhood, adolescence, and adulthood. This distinctive organization enables students to comprehend
