

3. GOALS AND OBJECTIVES OF REINTRODUCTION

3.1. Goals and objectives

Any conservation reintroduction proposal should clearly articulate its goals and objectives. IUCN guidelines emphasize this point and provide useful definitions of these terms (IUCN/SSC 2013, p. 5):

A Goal is a statement of the intended result of the conservation translocation. It should articulate the intended conservation benefit, and will often be expressed in terms of the desired size and number of populations that will achieve the required conservation benefit either locally or globally, all within an overall time frame.

Objectives detail how the goal(s) will be realized; they should be clear and specific and ensure they address all identified or presumed current threats to the species.

Because this Assessment is an evaluation of the feasibility of reintroduction, and not a reintroduction proposal, we do not attempt at this stage to prescribe a goal in terms of the specific number and size of populations that would achieve a desired conservation benefit or to identify clear objectives. However, at the end of this chapter we identify potential options that could be combined into a proposal, should reintroduction consideration proceed, that would allow a more concrete set of goals and objectives to be developed. It is possible at this stage to articulate broadly the desired conservation benefit of reintroducing sea otters to the Pacific Coast of the contiguous U.S. Sea otter reintroduction would advance two interrelated and overarching conservation goals:

1. Restoration of the species, Enhydra lutris, within important gaps in its historical range, including improving the status of the federally threatened subspecies, E. l. nereis or southern sea otter, and
2. Restoration of ecosystem function (improving ecosystem resilience, including resilience to the effects of climate change; enhancing biodiversity; and increasing carbon sequestration).

These conservation goals are reflected in the Congressional language that directed the Service to conduct this Assessment, and they also align with the Service's mandates under the Endangered Species Act of 1973, as amended (ESA), and Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972, as amended (MMPA). The ESA requires that we "protect and recover imperiled species and the ecosystems upon which they depend." The MMPA requires that we "prevent marine mammal species and population stocks from diminishing, as a result of human activities, beyond the point at which they cease to be significant functioning elements of the ecosystems of which they are a part."
