

BOX 4.3 THE SCIENCE OF FREAKONOMICS

- Do school teachers cheat on tests so that they and their students will look good?
 - Do police really lower crime rates?
 - Why does capital punishment not deter criminals?
 - Which is more dangerous to your child: the family owning a swimming pool or a gun?
 - Why are doctors so bad at washing their hands?
 - What's the best way to catch a terrorist?
 - Are people hard-wired for altruism or selfishness?
 - Why is chemotherapy prescribed so often if it's so ineffective?
- These questions, and others, were asked by the maverick social scientist, Steven D. Levitt, in his best-selling books, Freakonomics and Super-Freakonomics (Levitt & Dubner, 2005; 2009). The answers he gives come from archival analyses of student test scores, sports records, crime statistics, birth and death statistics, and much more. We won't give away all the answers based on this clever researcher's mining of society's archives, but we will say that in this era of high-stakes testing, public school teachers sometimes cheat, and if you own both a gun and a swimming pool, your child is 100 times more likely to die by drowning than by gunplay.
