

2001: A Space Odyssey

Arthur C. Clarke

About the author

Arthur C. Clarke was born in 1917 and graduated from the University of London with a First Class Honours Degree in Physics and Mathematics. He is a member of the Academy of Astronautics, the Royal Astronomical Society and many other scientific organizations.

He is a prolific author with over fifty titles to his credit, many of them books describing factual discoveries in science and astronomy for the general reader. The use of the latest scientific theories and technological inventions in his science fiction stories add to their realism and take them a step beyond the 'cops and robbers/cowboys and Indians' pattern of much earlier science fiction. Among others, he has written the science fiction classics, Childhood's End, The City and the Stars, The Sands of Mars and Rendezvous with Rama. The last title won all three of science fiction's most prestigious awards, the Hugo, Nebula and John W. Campbell Memorial Awards.

He collaborated with the film director Stanley Kubrick for four years in developing the plot for the Oscar-nominated 2001: A Space Odyssey and his novel and Kubrick's film came out in 1968, one year before a man stepped on the Moon for the first time. The film and book were enormously successful and both men became famous.

Summary

This is the story of a billion-kilometre journey to solve a three million-year-old puzzle. Against the backdrop of the space age in 2001, scientists stationed at the base on the Moon have uncovered a three metre-high black object which is about three million years old and is considered the first proof of intelligent life beyond Earth. As the sun strikes it, the object sends a powerful radio signal aimed exactly at Saturn. Who put the object on the Moon? Who is waiting for its signal? Is life possible beyond Earth? The spaceship Discovery is given the mission to travel from Earth to make contact with the rings of Saturn to solve the mystery.

PART ONE (Chapters 1 to 6)

Millions of years ago a group of man-apes live on the African grasslands struggling to survive. One day a large, smooth rock suddenly appears near them. The rock has the power to enter their minds and instil new ways of thinking. With this new intelligence, the man-apes can now learn how to survive better by making and using tools. The rock disappears. Time passes and the ape men become humans. They develop culture and language. From the African grasslands they spread slowly over the world and survive four Ice Ages. They learn how to make fire and use the forces of nature. This is the birth of civilization.

PART TWO (Chapters 7 to 14)

Dr Heywood Floyd travels in a spaceship to the space station on the Moon, where he meets one of his best friends, a scientist from the USSR, Dr Dimitri Moisevitch. Then Floyd takes the spaceplane to the Clavius base on the Moon where he attends a meeting about a magnetic disturbance detected in a crater on the Moon. After digging, a large black object named TMA-1 is found, which is the first proof of intelligent life beyond Earth. Floyd and a team of scientists drive across the Moon to have a closer look at TMA-1. Upon their arrival, sunlight hits it for the first time in three million years. It then sends out radio signals directed at Saturn.

PART THREE (Chapters 15 to 20)

Discovery, carrying a crew of five including David Bowman and Frank Poole, is sent to Saturn to solve the mystery. The sixth member of the crew is a supercomputer (Hal) which is the artificial brain and central control of Discovery. Bowman and Poole are on duty and the rest of the crew are in hibernation. For Discovery, the journey is a one-way trip. All crew members will finally be in hibernation and wait to be rescued by Discovery II. During the journey, Discovery goes past Mars and Jupiter.

PART FOUR (Chapters 21 to 30)

When Discovery is just beyond Jupiter, Hal starts to malfunction when he reports something wrong with the AE-35 unit when, in fact, nothing is wrong with it. Bowman and Poole intend to disconnect Hal, but no action is taken yet. Poole goes out of the ship to bring
