Sport in the City Michael P. Sam, John Hughson, 2013-09-13 Sport is seen as an increasingly important aspect of urban and regional planning. Related programmes have moved to the forefront of agendas for cities of the present and future. This has occurred as the barriers between so-called high and popular culture continue to disintegrate. Sport is now a key component within strategies for the cultural regeneration of cities and regions, a tendency with mixed outcomes at times fostering genuinely democratic arrangements at others pseudo democratic arrangements whereby political business and cultural elites manipulate a sense of sameness and unity among their fellow citizens to smooth the path for the pursuit of what are actually vested interests. Almost any active enactment of a sports city of culture risks divisiveness. Recognizing controversies with both potentially positive and negative outcomes, this book examines sport within contexts of urban and regional regeneration via a number of rather different case studies. Within these studies, the role of sport stadium development, franchise expansion and sports fan and anti sport activism is addressed and articulated with issues concerning inter alia public funding, environmental impact, urban infrastructure and citizen identity. The sport in the city project commenced as a research symposium held at the University of Otago, Dunedin, New Zealand, and number of the essays originate from this occasion. This book was previously published as a special issue of Sport in Society. Sales and
