Reading/Class

By tonight read these items:

This case presents the student with financial information from points of confidential sources and asks them to make the diagnosis of the company while the financial picture develops from the clues. The primary objective of this case is to illustrate weaknesses in management strategy. Implementing the range of value-added suggestions was difficult. I felt very gratified that students have shown a keen interest in the challenge of solving financial cases through their readings in business.

Suggestion for Assignment:
There are numerous value-added suggestions included in this case. The student may wish to select a few of these suggestions to implement.

The various elements of general management, such as strategy, culture, or structure, affect a number of important business performance and financial performance. First, the organization of business activities affects the significant outcomes. In general, there is a difference in performance, perhaps a significant one, in companies that have a different structure. Second, financial performance results from management decisions. Third, the organization of business activities affects the outcomes. The difference in the outcomes is the result of the difference in the organization of business activities.
